A REUNION SOUVENIR

To the little bunch of Second Regiment men who will assemble at Weirs in August—a possible two score out of more than two thousand who at one time or another marched beneath its banners—this little volume is presented as an appropriate Reunion souvenir. The Roster printed with the History twenty years ago brought the record of deaths, so far as they could then be ascertained, up to date. This is supplemental to that roster and bears the names of none there recorded as deceased, except in a very few instances to correct incomplete or erroneous records.

No one can have a keener realization than myself of the shortcomings of this roll. But for my absence from the State, and sometimes from the country, much of the time in the past twenty years, it would doubtless be more satisfactory than it is. Not all are here who in the past two decades have "crossed over the river to rest in the shade of the trees." Some of the individual records I have gathered are more or less incomplete, owing to the difficulty, and sometimes absolute impossibility, of procuring full information. But on the other side of the balance sheet, I have a lot of newspaper announcements, more or less extended, preserving matters of historical and biographical value. The contemporary obituaries here reproduced will have more than a passing interest for the little knot of tough old Veterans who have so far dodged being "written up." Their generally appreciative tone will confirm and deepen our ancient conviction that the Old Second was made up of the salt of the earth and the cream of New Hampshire's virile young manhood.

I regret that I have been unable to secure more of these sketches. Doubtless many of the old boys, as they well deserved, had handsome things written about them, which I have not been in the way of running across. This little volume will interest only a very limited circle; but to you, the surviving comrades, it will be of absorbing interest to follow the individual records of so many of those who marched and camped and fought with us more than half a century ago. With all its imperfections, this is the best record that ever has or ever will be gotten together, and I present it to you with my comradely compliments and best wishes.

M. A. H.

Lakeport, New Hampshire, August, 1917.
The muffled drum's sad roll has beat the soldier's last tattoo.
No more on life's parade shall meet that brave and fallen few.
On Fame's eternal camping ground their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards with ceaseless round the bivouac of the dead.

ADAMS, Enoch G., Co. D., died Berwick, Me., Nov. 9, 1900.

Major Enoch George Adams is dead. He was a descendant of Hamelin Plantagenet, uncle of Richard the Lion Hearted, and of the Rev. John Adams, uncle of President John Adams. Major Adams was born in Bow, N. H., and after graduating from Yale University, spent several years teaching in the public schools in his native State. He joined a New Hampshire regiment at the outbreak of the Civil War and distinguished himself in a number of battles. In 1864 his regiment [1st U. S. V.] was transferred to Fort Rice, Dakota Territory, and from May 10 until Sept. 2, 1865 he commanded that fort. During that period Major Adams met and vanquished the famous Sitting Bull and 70,000 warriors, killing with his own hands two of the most noted chiefs of the Minnesota massacre—Red Dog and Big Thunder. He was brevetted Major on the 13th of March, 1865, and was mustered out of service at Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 29, 1865. In 1880, Major Adams started the Columbian, a weekly paper in Maine.

ADAMS, John W., Chaplain, died Methuen, Mass., May 26, 1915.

The Rev. John W. Adams, 83 years old, past commander and oldest member of Colonel William B. Greene Post, G. A. R., died today at his home on High street. He had resided in Methuen twenty years and was its oldest clergyman. He was born in Townsend, 1 is ancestors being an old colonial family from which the Adamses, United States' Presidents, claim descent. He was ordained when he was 24 years old, and for 50 years was active in the ministry and connected with the New Hampshire Methodist Conference. He was president of the board of trustees of the Tilton, N. H. Seminary, and for 35 years a member. He enlisted in the 2d New Hampshire regiment in 1883, and with the army entered Richmond on the day of its surrender, April 3, 1865. He married Miss Rebecca Hardison 1854, and after her death in 1877, married Lydia M. Trefethen of Rye, N. H. He was a member of the Knights Templar, Massachusetts Commandery of the Military Order of Loyal Legion, and the Massachusetts Society Sons of the American Revolution. He is survived by a daughter by his first wife, Mrs. Mary E. Sanborn of Chichester, N. H., and a son and daughter by his second wife, Dr. Charles W. Adams of Franklin, N. H., and Mrs. Viola Foss of Rye, N. H.

ADAMS, Oren S., Co. A, died October 29, 1908.

ALDRICH, Lyman M., Co. I, died Manchester, February 19, 1911.

The death is announced of Lyman M. Aldrich, for many years a building contractor in this city, the first building inspector of Manchester, and a well-known war veteran. Mr. Aldrich had not been seriously ill but a few days, and was on the street as recently as Tuesday last. The cause of his death was a hardening of the arteries. He was over 70 years of age. Mr. Aldrich died at 4:45 o'clock yesterday morning, at his late home, 443 Bridge street. He was a native of Lisbon, where he was born in 1840. At the age of 15 years he came to Manchester, and this city, with the exception of a short time spent in Vermont, has since been his home. He worked in the mills here on the Stark and Manchester corporations until April, 1861, when he showed his patriotism by being one of the first to enlist under Capt. Edward L. Bailey in what was known as the Abbott Guards. He went out first as a three months' volunteer, and subsequently re-enlisted for three years, serving with conspicuous gallantry as a member of Company I, Second New Hampshire Infantry. He participated in both battles at Bull Run, Fredericksburg, and in all the engagements in which the regiment participated until Gettysburg.
Allen, Charles H., Co. C, died Auburn, January 8, 1902.

The Worcester Spy of Wednesday morning contains an account of the death in that city of Charles N. Allen, of the firm of Allen & Regan, license liquor dealers. Mr. Allen spent his boyhood in Manchester, and in 1861 enlisted in the Second N. H. regiment from this city. He was soon detailed as hospital steward, and later in the war was transferred to the regular army in the same capacity. He was mustered out in March, 1866, after five years of intelligent and faithful service, and after his discharge went into the drug business. Then he became a bartender, and worked in Boston, Saratoga and Springfield. He went to Worcester with Mr. Shepard when the latter assumed control of the Bay State house. Three years ago he went into business for himself.

Mr. Allen was a member of Post 10, G. A. R., and of the Union Veteran Union and the Union Veteran Legion. He also was a member of the Wapiti Club and the German Verein Frosin. He was probably the oldest member of the Order of Elks in Worcester, being a member of Providence lodge. He married Miss Childs of Nashua, who died some thirteen years ago. His only son, Harry H. Allen, who was graduated from Worcester Polytechnic in 1887, is employed in the patent office chemical department at Washington. He leaves a brother, J. W. Allen, of Newton, Mass., and a sister, the wife of Charles A. Hone, a teacher at Albany, N. Y.

Allen, Heman, Co. H, died Anchor, McLean Co., Ill., 1912.

Appleton, William H., Co. I, died Suncook, September 9, 1912.

Veterans of the Civil War in New Hampshire were saddened this week by the news of the sudden death at his home in Suncook, on Monday, of Maj. William H. Appleton, one of the most gallant of those young men of the Granite State who went to the front in the early days of the Civil War and who gained promotion by conspicuous bravery in the field. Major Appleton was born in Chichester November 24, 1842, and when the call to arms came for the preservation of the Union he enlisted as a private in the Abbott Guard of Manchester and became a member of Company I of the Second New Hampshire volunteers. He was promoted to corporal on November 5, 1862, and was honorably discharged July 30 of the following year that he might accept a commission as second lieutenant of the fourth United States colored troops. In July, 1864, he was promoted to first lieutenant and became a captain a few months later, on November 26. He received the brevet rank of major on March 13, 1865, as a reward for gallant and meritorious conduct. The war record of Major Appleton was a particularly enviable one and was equalled by very few of the New Hampshire men who fought with the armies of the Union. He participated in all the battles and skirmishes in which his two regiments were engaged, these including the first and second battles of Bull Run, Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, White Oak Swamp, Savage Station, Charles City Cross Roads, Malvern Hill, Kettle Run, Frederickburg, Gettysburg, he various assaults on Petersburg, the fights at Newmarket Heights and Chapin's Farm, the capture of Fort Anderson and Wilmington. For gallantry displayed in the engagements while Grant's army was besieging Richmond, he received a medal of honor from Congress.

After the war Major Appleton took a position in the Treasury Department and at the same time studied law at Columbia College. He was later transferred to the patent office and was principal examiner for seventeen years. After that, for fifteen years or more, he was a practicing attorney and a mechanical expert in New York city. He gave up his work in the metropolis two years ago and returned to New Hampshire, making his home in Suncook. He was a member of the Loyal Legion of New York, a Mason and a Knight Templar. He is survived by his brother, George P. Appleton of Suncook and Clifton Appleton of Mount Holly, N. J., and by two sisters. Mrs. Edward Badger and Miss Appleton of Suncook. Major Appleton was one of the rarely met gentlemen of the old school, a successful man of affairs, a brave soldier and one who was modest and unassuming in all the relations of life. His death will be sincerely mourned by a great number of people who had had experience of his generosity and kindliness.

Atherton, Sanford A., Co. A, died Dubuque, Iowa, 1900.

Bachelder, George F., Co. I, died Tamworth, August 21, 1913.

At 12.30 Mr. Cummings ministered at the funeral services of George F. Bachelder, who died of heart disease at the post of duty, being at the town hall on matters connected with the school board and passed away on the steps Thursday evening, August 21, at the age of 67 years. Since he became a resident of this town he has been prominent and active in both town and school matters and he was re-elected on the school board last March for three years. He belonged to the famous Second N. H. regiment and was wounded at Gettysburg. Although that wound had troubled him during the past year, he was able to attend the reunion there in July. He was formerly connected with the I. O. O. F. For seven years he was a member of Chocorua grange, serving as Lecturer and Master four years. Mr. Bachelder always had a hearty greeting for his friends (and they were many), his last to us being only twenty-four hours before his death. He leaves a widow to whom the sympathy of all goes out. The remains were laid to rest at Riverside.

Barker, John A., Co. C, died Manchester, September 23, 1907.

Capt. John A. Barker, city messenger for thirty years, died at his home, 49 Appleton street, about 4 o'clock Monday morning, after a brief illness which, from the first, was recognized as the attack which the brave old soldier could not sustain. For several years Captain Barker had known that he was failing. He felt more and more the effects of the terrible wound received at Gettysburg and found that he must lay aside unnecessary work and make a fight for life. He resigned from the First Light Battery, and thus got a vast amount of work off his hands. He passed his summers under canvas on the bank of the Merrimack in the Read-Barker camp, and thus found a measure of health that enabled him to perform his duties as city messenger. But troubles came to prey upon his mind and add their weight to the infirmities that pressed hard on his body, and when his son-in-law, Bert Davis, sickened in the camp by the river and died soon after being taken home, he received a shock which told on him heavily. Still he struggled bravely on, and as late as September 6, joined with his camp mate, Mr. Reed, in entertaining the members of the city government at the camp up the river. He took his bed soon after that pleasant outing, and from that day he and his friends knew that "taps" was the next bugle call for the veteran.

To the hundreds of men who have been in the city government in the last three decades and who thus came into close contact with Captain Barker, to scores of others who were in the battery with him; to comrades in the G. A. R.; to many others his death brings a sense of personal loss, and as the news of it circulated through the city there was a general expression of deep, personal sorrow.

Capt. John Anthony Barker was born at Landaff, May 1, 1842, the son of Samuel and Sarah Barker, and celebrated his 65th birthday last spring. He passed his early childhood days on the farm and at the age of eight came to Manchester, and went to work in the mills when he was thirteen years old. He was nineteen when the war broke out and he enlisted in the Second New Hampshire volunteers, while his brothers, Nat Barker, who was afterwards assistant chief of the Somerville, Mass., fire department, and Jason Barker, who was killed at Fredericksburg, entered the service in the Eleventh regiment.

After the war he went to Nashville, Tenn., where he was employed by the government for a year to guard public property. Then he came to Manchester and worked for A. W. Sanborn, at Elm and Bridge streets, and later was engaged at different occupations until he was elected city messenger, thirty-two years ago. At that time he was working as night watchman in the mills, and L. Brooks had charge of his candidacy for the office. That it was a wise choice when he was elected was proven by his service, and his city showed its appreciation by re-electing him year after year.

He married, on December 4, 1869, Maria P. Towne, of Manchester, and their married life was most happy. Their union was blessed by three children, Dick Barker of the Manchester Bank, and Mrs. Albert Davis, who survive him, and an other daughter who died in infancy, twenty-three years ago. Captain Barker was the last of a family of seven children—five boys and two girls. He was a member of Wilder Lodge of Odd Fellows, the Knights and Ladies of Honor, and was formerly a member of the N. E. Order of Protection. His greatest interest, however, was in his veteran organizations. He was a member of Louis Bell Post, G. A. R., of the Manchester War Veterans, and of the Veterans' Union. Of social organizations, he was connected with the E. Manchester Veteran Firemen's Association and the Manchester Turnverein.

Looking back over Capt. Barker's life for conspicuous incidents that serve to indicate its main current, one sees a little gathering of men in the meeting room of the old battery building in Manchester. It was on the night of January 1st, 1902, and the meeting was the annual one of the First Light Battery, N. H. N. G. In its course, after a moment of silence when every one knew that an unpleasant thing had to be done, Clerk Hall, now Lieutenant of the organization, read the old soldier's letter of resignation. It was a cheerful, optimistic communication, full of encouragement for the command, but final with reference to the particular business in hand. The reading was followed by complete silence. Captain Wallace then spoke for the lieutenant and explained his position, and put the resignation formally before the command. Still there was no response. Again the captain spoke briefly and feelingly, and then the battery reluctantly voted to grant the desired discharge, to place Lieutenant Barker's name on the honor roll and to have resolutions drafted. And what was there about this meeting of a military company and the resignation of an officer that made it different from others, that made it a conspicuous incident in a man's life? This, that it closed a military service of forty years, a service which was the one outstanding feature of his life, into which he had put the best there was in him.

It was on May 20, 1861, John Barker's military career began, when he enlisted in Company C of the Second New Hampshire Volunteers in this city. He was mustered in at Portsmouth, went directly to the front, and was in the first battle of Bull Run, which was disastrous for him as well as for the army, for he was made a prisoner and was sent...
Second New Hampshire

to Libby prison. He was kept there eight weeks and was then transferred to the old Parish prison in New Orleans. Thence he was sent to Salisbury, N. C. He was exchanged and rejoined his regiment. All this took a long time, and it was June, 1862, when he was once more with the army. In February, 1863, he was made a corporal.

The Second Regiment had done a good deal of fighting while Barker was in prison, and there was much more in store for it. The young corporal got his last taste of battle at Gettysburg. There, in the second day’s fighting, he was struck by a piece of shell and nearly killed. Months passed before he was able to be about, and then it was simply to be honorably discharged on June 7, 1864. He bore the mark of Gettysburg in a hole in his skull, in which a man could lay three fingers. Perhaps Captain Barker’s own account of the wound, given to a Union reporter several years ago, will be interesting:

“I was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, July 2, 1863, by a fragment of a shell. The Second Regiment was under fire at the time and was supporting a battery. General Longstreet made an assault on the angle of the Second. The Rebs threw all kinds of shell into our position—common, fuse, shrapnel and grape. I was leaning up against a small peach tree at the time. A shell burst within a dozen feet of me. I hardly know how to describe my situation. The last thing before my eyes was the form of Col. Bailey and prostrate forms of the men as they were lying down for safety. The shell exploded at my left. I was struck on the top of the head by a fragment, and was knocked insensible. The first thing I knew afterwards was that my comrades were trying to carry me to the rear. I could see nothing. Suddenly I was dropped, and I never knew why until I got home, months afterwards, and met my comrades. It seems that the man who had hold of my right leg, Charles Moore by name, was killed, and the remainder of my would-be rescuers were ordered back to the regiment and had to obey. Moore is now buried in the National Cemetery at Gettysburg.

“I lay on the ground. The Rebs were coming up fast. It seemed to me as if matters were becoming pretty warm, and I began to crawl. I did not know where I was going, but had the queer impression that I was going to the rear. Soon I crawled up against a man. I tried to arouse him to have him assure me that my direction was correct. The man, however, was dead. I did not dare to go around him for fear I would lose my way by swerving, and I straddled over him. I came to another fellow, who was wounded. I was about to crawl over him when he asked me where I was going. I told him I was going to the rear. All the time I had been crawling along the rear of the battle line. I was taken to the corps hospital. I was struck by the shell at four o’clock in the afternoon and did not get under the surgeon’s care until the next afternoon, when I was told my skull was fractured.”

The Medical and Surgical History of the War says the following about Mr. Barker’s case: “The upper portion of the occipital bone was fractured and depressed to the extent of two inches square by a fragment of a shell. The patient was admitted into the Gattiere hospital, Philadelphia, on the 10th, very much debilitated and complaining of pain over the eyes. His mental faculties were somewhat sluggish, but not to any marked degree. A fragment of bone had come away, leaving the brain exposed. The trephine was applied and the largest piece of depressed bone removed. On January 9, 1864, another portion of the occipital bone, of an oval shape, two inches long, was removed by Acting Assistant Surgeon L. K. Baldwin. The patient had some inflammation of the brain and erysipelas, but recovered under ordinary treatment. On March 7, 1864, he was transferred to De Camp hospital, David’s Island, New York harbor, where he was discharged from service by reason of vertigo and constant pain in the head.” The bone which was taken from Mr. Barker’s head is now in the Medical museum at Washington.

John Barker’s experience in the war had been of the kind that might have been expected to cool the ardor of any one in whom the military instinct was not paramount. It had just the opposite effect on him. He became a member of an infantry militia organization upon his return and remained with it two years. Then the First Light Battery was organized, and although he was offered a commission in the infantry service, he refused it and became one of the original members of the present artillery organization. He was the last of the original members to leave it. He became a member of the battery May 19, 1867. On June 4, 1873, he got his first promotion, being made corporal. He was made sergeant on May 1, 1879. Then came the second lieutenancy on June 11, 1894. He was brevetted captain on December 16, 1901.

So much for the chronological record. It tells little except that Captain Barker remained with the organization and advanced steadily through the offices. To know what lies in back of this record one must have been with him in the battery. At Concord, on the range, at drills, inspections, wherever the organization was under orders, there was he. He never missed an encampment in all the years of his membership. And he not only was present, but he was at work. Efficiency was his watchword, applied rigidly to himself first of all, and then to every one under him, with a view to helping all to as high a degree of military excellence and the enjoyment of the service as possible. It was a pleasure to work with him. In the later years of his association with the command he devoted himself particularly to the revolver practice on the range in West Manchester. He was there frequently and took keen, personal interest in the work of beginners. It is not too much to say that the splendid revolver team that has been developed, and the high average maintained in recent years by the command are to a considerable extent the result of the patient, intelligent work that Captain Barker did with recruits in the days when the organization was far from successful in this branch.

It was just because he could not attend closely to these duties of the range, the schools of instruction and the drills, could not put into them the downright hard work he felt his position imposed upon him, that he resigned in 1902. He was weakening then, the injury to his head received at Gettysburg was telling heavily on his general good health, and he had to have all the relaxation he could get. So that meeting in the old Battery room was an event in his life, and a memorable incident in those of all who ever associated with him. It was the beginning of the formal close of the one thing which for forty years had been his ruling passion.

On February 16, 1902, there was another gathering in the old Battery building. Almost the entire command was there, in uniform, and the ladies were there. Captain Barker and Mrs. Barker were the guests of honor. It was the night when the battery men bade their old comrade good bye, presented him with a handsome sword and a copy of the resolutions adopted. Everyone was sorry to lose him, but everyone felt that the best way to show it was by having the jolliest time possible, and Captain and Mrs. Barker probably never had a gayer time than on that evening. With the formal presentation over, the affair became a great, informal jollification—a hearty, rollicking sendoff, in which all the fraternalism, sociability and comradeship of the organization was gathered up and centered upon John Barker and his wife, whose motherly interest in “the boys” made her essentially a part of the organization.

Sewall D. Batchelder, a well-known resident of this city, died at his home on Exchange street, Saturday afternoon, after a long illness, aged 69 years, 9 months and 21 days. He was born in Concord, September 2, 1845, and was the son of William and Orilla Messer Batchelder, and had lived in this city the greater part of his life. Mr. Batchelder served in the Second New Hampshire Volunteers during the late rebellion and was a member of E. E. Sturtevant Post, G. A. R., of Concord, and was also a member of Wantistquit Lodge I. O. O. F., of Brattleboro, Vt. He is survived by a widow and one sister, Mrs. Mary J. Sanders, both of Concord.

CONCORD, June 29.—The funeral of Sewall D. Batchelder was held this afternoon at the home on Exchange street—The Plains. Rev. Frank J. Davis conducted the funeral service. The rituals of the Salvation Army and the G. A. R. were also performed. Ensign A. C. Harvey performed the Salvation Army service, singing being by Ensign Ivel and Mrs. J. L. Hanson. The Grand Army service was performed by Acting Commander Edward P. Kimball and Chaplain Truman Weed. The bearers were Alvin B. Edmunds, Ernest C. Dudley, Clarence Davis and Harold Wakefield of the Odd Fellows. Burial was in the Gossville cemetery in Epsom.

Albert F. Baxter died today of apoplexy at the New Hampshire Soldiers' Home in Tilton, aged 70 years. He was in Company G, Second New Hampshire Regiment, and came to the home two years ago from Nashua. He was twice married and leaves children in Laconia, Lowell, Malden, Antrim and Nashua. The body will be taken to Antrim for funeral and burial.

ANTRIM, March 6.—The funeral of Rev. A. F. Baxter, whose death took place last Tuesday at the Soldiers' Home at Tilton, was held today, at 1:30 p. m., at the Woodbury Memorial M. E. church, with a large attendance of townspeople, many of whom were former parishioners of Mr. Baxter during his pastorate in Antrim many years ago. A daughter, Mrs. Edith Muzzey, still lives here.

Bean, Beniah J., Co. G, died Lisbon, June 24, 1905.

Bean, Daniel O., Co. A, died Milan, September 1, 1909.

Captain Edward D. Bean, one of the best-known residents of Arlington, Mass., died at the home of his son, Harlan B. Bean, Saturday, after an illness of several weeks. Capt. Bean was born in Hollis, Maine, July 29, 1838. At the outbreak of the civil war he was among the first to offer his services and enlisted with Company C, Second New Hampshire regiment. He served with distinction, and when he was mustered out, December 19, 1865, he had the rank of captain. He was at Bull Run and Gettysburg. At Gettysburg he was taken prisoner, but managed to escape and get back to his regiment. He was an engineer officer, officer of the picket, aide-de-camp to General Henry, commissary-sergeant, and was connected with the Freedmen's Bureau. He received honorable mention many times.

After the war Captain Bean returned to Biddeford, where he spent some time. Later he went to Lynn to live, but for the past twenty-three years he has lived at Arlington Heights. The past seven years he has made his home with his son, where he died. He was an inventor, and among the articles which bear his name are the Bean handcuffs, twisters and various other police equipments which are in use at the present time. He was with the John P. Lovell arms company for many years, but seven years ago he retired. He was an active member of Francis Gould Post, 36, G. A. R., of Arlington. He is survived by a wife and two sons, Harlan B. and Walter M., the latter being a resident of Stoneham. The funeral took place yesterday. A G.A.R. service was held.

Bennett, John H., Co. E, died Exeter, date unknown.

Billings, Warren, Co. E, died Dover, 1887.

Blake, John A., Co. A, died Keene, October 23, 1904.

Bohonon, Daniel W., Co. E, died Richmond, Va., July 25, 1880.

Brown, Robert, Co. F, died August 24, 1905.
Buchanan, James, Co. K, died Chester, July 13, 1915.
James Buchanan, an aged Civil War veteran, died at the home of Mrs. A. C. Walton today.

Chester, July 16.—The funeral of James Buchanan, who died July 13 at the Leighton homestead, on the Derry road, at the age of 94 years, was held there this afternoon, at his late home, Rev. Albert Hall officiating. The bearers were his late comrades—E. N. McKay, J. W. Chase, C. W. Noyes and C. F. True. Burial was in the village cemetery by C. H. Gordon, furnishing undertaker and funeral manager, of Derry.

Buckley, Dennis, Co. C, died Morrow, Ohio, June 20, 1908, while absent, with leave, from National Military Home at Dayton.

Burke, William, Co. A, buried in Blossom Hill Cemetery, Concord; date of death unknown.
Burley, Josiah, Co. C, died Rochester, date unknown.
Burnham, Cyrus E, Co. F, died Littleton, December, 1900.
Burpee, Merrick M., Co. D, died Winchester, October 18, 1890.
Burrill, John H., Co. A, died Hawley, Minn., June 12, 1906.
Burt, George, Co. F, died Lancaster, January 23, 1905.

The funeral of James R. Carr was held at his late home, 104 Prospect street, yesterday (February 15.) Rev. Arnold S. Vantis of the Universalist church officiated. The several secret orders in which he held membership sent delegations, including the Odd Fellows, Rebekahs and New England Order of Protection. The bearers were George E. Morrill, John G. McAllaster, Fred F. Fisher, Clarence D. Palmer, Thomas W. Lane and James G. Ellinwood.

Casey, Richard, Co. H, buried in Calvary Cemetery, Concord; date of death unknown.

Chadbourn, Moses, Co. D, died Dover, October 24, 1916.
Moses W. Chadbourn, for many years a resident of this city and Civil War veteran, died last evening at his home, 140 Washington street, aged 74 years. Mr. Chadbourn was born in South Berwick, Me., April 27, 1842, was the son of George G. and Eunice (Boston) Chadbourn, and his boyhood days were spent in that town, where he obtained his education. At the breaking out of the Civil War he enlisted in Company D, Second New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry. The date of his first enlistment was April 30, 1861, for three months, but he was not mustered into service. He re-enlisted May 10, 1861, in the Second. He was discharged July 7, 1862. He re-enlisted November 8, 1863, and remained until the end of the war. He was discharged at Fredericksburg, Va., October 20, 1865.

Mr. Chadbourn removed to this town, from South Berwick, Me., in 1872, when he bought the ice business of the Mussey brothers. A few years ago he sold out on account of ill health. He is survived by a wife, one brother, John Chadbourn of North Brookfield, Mass.; two sisters, Mrs. Stephen Moody of Arlington, Mass., and Mrs. Stacy
Hall of Bridgeport, Conn., and several nephews and nieces.

Chadwick, George W., Co. G, died Soldiers' Home, Tilton, Nov.
16, 1907.

Chilley, George W., Co. I, died Denver, Colorado, April 16, 1910.

My brother, George W. Chilley, fell asleep in Jesus at his home in Denver, Colorado, April 16, 1910, death being due to a heart trouble of many years' standing. He was born at Wilmot, N. H., May 5, 1834. He went to Colorado thirty years ago and has resided there most of the time since. This is from his sister, Mrs. Elida M. Wescott, of Danbury, New Hampshire.

Clifton, Henry F., Co. C, died Cohoes, N. Y., Dec. 19, 1911.

Harry F. Clifton, who some years ago was a very well-known citizen of Manchester, a prominent Amoskeag Veteran, and one of the charter members and a past exalted ruler of the Manchester branch of Elks, died in a hospital at Cohoes, N. Y., Tuesday night.
The news arrived in Manchester by telegram addressed to Chief Thomas W. Lane, secretary of the local Elks, as follows:

"H. F. Clifton died last night. Elks service here tomorrow. Body leaves on midnight train via Boston. Michael Organ, Secretary Troy Lodge."

A letter from Secretary Organ followed. The letter stated that Mr. Clifton had been taken to the hospital by the direction of the Troy lodge of Elks for an examination and operation. It was found that an operation was impossible. Shortly after entering the hospital
Mr. Clifton became unconscious and died Tuesday night. Secretary Organ's letter stated that Mr. Clifton's financial condition was very poor, and that he had expressed a wish, before overtaken by unconsciousness, that his body be taken to Manchester and interred beside Mrs. Clifton, who had died on March 1 of last year. The Troy lodge undertook the arrangements to comply with Mr. Clifton's last wishes.

Mr. Clifton, the letter stated, had been living at Schaghticoke, a village within a few miles of Troy. Schaghticoke was the place to which Mr. Clifton went, after leaving Manchester a number of years ago, and where he had embarked in the hotel business.
The letter stated that if the army discharge papers of Mr. Clifton could be produced, the county in New York would pay a portion of the funeral and death expenses. Manchester lodge of Elks, through Secretary Lane, was prompt in its reply, and Mr. Clifton's body will be received here Friday morning and all respect will be paid his memory—as that of one of the men who was a charter member and who was largely instrumental in the formation of the lodge of Elks here.

Some fifteen or twenty years ago Mr. Clifton was one of the best-known men in Manchester. He had figured as a soldier in the Civil war, and had enlisted when a mere boy. In fact, it had been stated that he was one of the youngest soldiers who went from this state. He was connected with one of the regiments that reached Concord, shortly after the editorial attacks on the Union soldiers by the Palmer brothers in their newspaper, and was present when the indignant soldiers destroyed the newspaper office and threw the contents of the printing office into the streets of Concord.

For many years Mr. Clifton conducted a saloon and restaurant in what is known as Dean avenue, or "Cat alley," which was a favorite resort for many of the pioneers and old-time residents of Manchester, most of whom are now gone. In his last days in Manchester, he took charge of the old Massabesic House at the lake, and for several summers ran that place somewhat successfully. The old Massabesic House was since destroyed by fire. He was a familiar figure in the ranks of the Amoskeag Veterans, and always accompanied the battalion when it took its trips.

There are many Manchester people of a generation ago who will remember Mr. Clifton well. He was a man who had a large heart, was always jovial and friendly, and many times, when he was in his most prosperous days, would put his hand down into his pocket and help those who were then less fortunate than himself in the world's goods. He possessed many good traits, and, as inferred, that of generosity and cheerfulness was a prime quality with him. He is survived by one son and one daughter.

Collins, James, Co. K, died 1895.

Corey, Amos L., Co. D, died March 11, 1909.

Cotton, John F., died Northwood, December 27, 1900.

County, Dennis, Co. I, died Sold. Home, Tilton, Nov. 8, 1914.

Dennis County, a Civil War veteran, aged 73 years, passed away at the Soldiers’ Home, Monday, of organic heart disease. The body was taken to Rumney today for funeral and interment. He was formerly a resident of Ashland, but had been an inmate of the Home for some time.

Craig, George W., Co. C, died Mound City, South Dakota, 1899.

[From The Prairie Pictuyre, Mound City, Campbell County, South Dakota, date early in 1899.—George W. Craig died very suddenly yesterday morning, just after starting away from George W. Woodard’s place near Gale. He was seated alone in his buggy when the death angel called him. Lee Woodard, who brought the painful news to Mound City, says he met Mr. Craig about a quarter of a mile, only, from his father’s house, and that he was gasping for breath and too far gone to speak. The remains were brought to Mound City last night and the funeral was held today at the M. E. church, Rev. Frank Fox, the pastor, preaching the funeral sermon. Then all that we have known as Grandfather Craig was laid to rest in the village cemetery,—the soul went to join his master, so devotedly loved. As to the cause of Mr. Craig’s death, it is well known that he has long been a sufferer from asthma, and it is supposed this, with perhaps some other complications, like heart disease, may have hastened the end.

Deceased was born in New Hampshire, May 13, 1833, being, therefore, nearly sixty-six years of age at the time of his death. He was married August 31, 1864, to Miss Lucy Goodrich, at Lowell, Mass. He moved to a point near Sauk Rapids, Minn., in 1866, and settled in Campbell county, S. D., in 1883. His only child now living is Mrs. May Desmond, wife of W. T. Desmond of Mound City. Mr. Craig fought on the Union side in the great civil war and was therefore one of the nation’s honored defenders. He was a member of the M. E. church, and was one of the stewards and trustees of the local church at the time of his death. He was an active and devoted Christian, placing his entire hope in Jesus and trusting Him fully. There is always this consolation for the friends of such a man as George W. Craig, namely, that when his spirit leaves the mortal tabernacle real joy and peace begins in the presence of the King of Kings and in the companionship of angels, on and on, forever. So good bye, dear friend and brother. Let us hope that your consistent Christian example may lead many friends whom you leave behind to grasp hold of the Rock of Ages, the only perfect comforter in life and the only hope in death.

Danforth, Charles H., Co. B, died Contoocook, July 15, 1914.

Danforth, John, Co. B, died Manchester, February 13, 1905.

Davis, George G., Co. A, died Marlborough, January 8, 1911.

The funeral of George G. Davis, one of the leading citizens of this town, took place at the home this afternoon [January 11] and was largely attended by the prominent men of Marlborough. Mr. Davis died last Sunday, following a long period of sickness and two years of confinement to his bed. He was 68 years of age. At the time the Civil War broke out Mr. Davis was among the first to enlist in Company A, Second New Hampshire Volunteers, which was the first regiment of three years men recruited in this state. He was in the first battle of Bull Run and in the battle of Williamsburg, where he received a wound in the arm, and later he was discharged. Mr. Davis is survived by a widow and one son, Lester G. Davis of this town; also two brothers and four sisters.

Davis, Harrison L., Co. F, died Franklin, March 14, 1900.

Davis, John, Co. C, died Auburn, February 6, 1911.

John Davis, for sixty years a resident of Auburn, died at his home there early yesterday morning. He was a native of Manchester and was 77 years, 9 months and 2 days of age. He had been in failing health for four years, and had not left his house since last fall.

Mr. Davis was a veteran of the Civil War, and a survivor of the Libby, New Orleans and Charleston prisons. He was captured at Bull Run and for a long time was among the thousands who, going into the war with the hope of rendering useful, effective service, saw months pass in inactivity and often in great suffering. He was finally exchanged, was appointed corporal, and served until June 21, 1864. He enlisted on May 16, 1861, in Company C, Second New Hampshire Volunteers. He was a member of Bell Post, G. A.

R., of Chester: a charter member of Massabesic Grange, No. 127; a member of the Manchester Old Residents' Association, and a member of the Methodist church in Auburn.

He is survived by his wife, Sylvina F. Davis; seven daughters, Mrs. Josie E. Smith of Thompson, Neb., Mrs. Lucy A. Buzzell of New Hampton, Mrs. Annie R. Ertel of Haddam, Kan., Mrs. Rosalie A. Gordon of New Hampton, Miss A. Belle Davis of Dover, Miss Mary E. Davis of Auburn and Mrs. Edith S. Emerson of Chester; two sons, John G. and Richard S., both of Auburn; seven grandchildren, and a sister, Mrs. Sophronia T. Young of Manchester.

DAVIS, MARTIN V. B., Co. C, died Sold. Home, Tilton, May 9, 1912.

Martin Van Buren Davis, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, died quite suddenly this morning from heart failure. He entered the home from Concord about twenty months ago, and his body is to be taken to that city for burial. He leaves a widow, who has been making her home in Tilton. Comrade Davis was a member of the First New Hampshire Cavalry, and also a member of Company C, of the Second New Hampshire Infantry in the Civil War, and also served in Company F of the Nineteenth United States Infantry.

DEAN, JOHN, Co. H, died in hospital in Boston in May, 1911.

DEARTH, WILLIAM, alias John Barney, Co. F, died Stewartstown, November, 1912.

DEETS, GEORGE C. H., Co. E, died April 2, 1904.

DEWEY, JESSE E., Co. I, died Lebanon, July 3, 1915.

[Tribute from The Senior Editor, Lebanon Free Press.]—Jesse Edson Dewey was born in Hanover, October 2, 1842, and was the son of Jesse Edson and Sarah A. (Porter) Dewey. The father, who for a time was in business in Lebanon, died when young Jesse was but two weeks old. The mother remarried, and Jesse was largely brought up by relatives. Besides the common school he attended a few terms at Kimball Union Academy. Subsequently he went to Manchester, into a machine shop. He was there when the civil war broke out, and he was there, at the age of 18, the twentieth man who enlisted from New Hampshire, April 22, 1861, only one week after President Lincoln's first call for 75,000 men for three months, issued April 15. Only one regiment was assigned to New Hampshire: but nearly enough for two enlisted. On the 3d of May the president called for three-years men, and, as we recall it, most of those who had enlisted for the three months and were not included in the First Regiment, re-enlisted for three years and constituted the Second Regiment. Mr. Dewey was among the latter. Few regiments saw more or heavier fighting than the New Hampshire Second, under Gen. Gilman Marston, who, like Col. Mason W. Tappan of the First Regiment, was a member of congress at the time. The regiment was later in command of Col. Edward L. Bailey. Young Dewey went thru that terrible struggle, was in nineteen battles, and was one of the few who came out whole. Mrs. Dewey still has his army blanket, thru thirteen thicknesses of which, folded and on his person, a bullet went and lodged against a piece of hardtack in his haversack. He was never heard to complain of the hardness of that bread. A piece of it is still preserved. This was at the battle of Fredericksburg. His haversack containing a bullet hole is also preserved. For gallantry in action he was promoted to sergeant, young as he was. Returned to civil life, he lived with his mother here, now Mrs. Ellis, and worked in one of our shops. He served several years as captain, promoted from a lieutenancy, in the Shaw Rifles, a company of the National Guard organized in 1879. The company disbanded about twenty-five years later, when the two regiments of the N. H. N. G. were consolidated into one, and the number of companies was reduced.

Modest and unassuming, with only moderate education, exemplary in life, it was soon seen that he was above the average of his fellows in natural ability. He wielded a ready pen, in a handsome and legible hand, was lucid in thought expression, with tongue or pen. He was often drafted into the service of the Free Press in the hunting up and writing locals, and especially in keeping the editor posted in what was going on in Grand Army circles. Needless to say his copy was popular with composers, especially above that of the editor. He took a lively interest in whatever pertained to the welfare of the community and the state.

He was elected clerk of the Lebanon Fire Precinct in 1879, and clerk of the Lebanon Police Court on its establishment, in 1878. In 1886 he was chosen to represent the town in the legislature. In 1893 he was appointed by the governor trial justice of the police court. He was the agent of the American Express Company twenty-five years, and thirty years member of the insurance firm of Dewey, Peck & Co. He was a director in the Manufacturers and Merchants Insurance Company at Concord.

He married Emeline A. Chase at Manchester in 1864, who died January, 1866. In November, 1871 he married Sarah Louise Currie, daughter of Thomas Currie, M.D., long a leading physician of Lebanon, and Sarah A. Currie. The ceremony was at Hanover, by the chaplain of the Second Regiment, the then Prof. Henry E. Parker, previous to the war pastor of the South Congregational church in Concord. The fruits of this union are Arthur Nelson Dewey, who has lately been in business with his father, and who it is now understood succeeds to the business, and Alice Belle Dewey, who remains with the now invalid mother.

He was from its organization a prominent and active member of James B. Perry Post, G. A. R., and one of the wisest and most trusted counselors in that body. Several members have said since the decease, to the writer, “I do not know how his place is to be filled.” He rendered service in every station in the gift of that organization, including, of course, that of commander. He was a leading spirit in promoting the erection of Memorial Hall, and one of the first eight veterans to pledge twenty dollars each for that purpose. Joined Star-Spangled-Banner Army Lodge, F. & A. M., chartered by Grand Lodge of New Hampshire, 1864, at Point Lookout, Md. Affiliated with Franklin Lodge, No. 6, Lebanon. Was a member of Kimball Chapter O. E. S., Lebanon.

He is understood to have met with some losses in early business life; they only served to make more manifest to those familiar therewith his sterling business integrity. “His word is as good as his bond” is the language in which one who knew reported the facts to the writer. He rose triumphantly out of his embarrassment; acquired a comfortable estate. Besides the comfortable home in Green street, Lebanon, he leaves a cottage at Mascoma Lake, where he and his family spent twenty-three summers, and where he will be also greatly missed. Right here may be the place to say that Jesse E. Dewey was a relative, only a few removes, from the man who, at Manila, is said to have told the German admiral that he could have war if he meant that, and said to Gridley, “You can fire, Mr. Gridley, when you are ready.”

Mr. Dewey had been in feeble health recently, but was thought to be convalescing, and only an hour before the end came all so unexpected on the afternoon of July 3, he was saying that he must go to the office the 5th. Mrs. Dewey left him in bed comfortable and in good spirits, to return shortly and find the silver cord had broken and the gentle, loving spirit had taken its flight. The heart had stopped beating; a painless demise. The community was shocked as news spread over the village. It threw a shadow over the Fourth of July festivities, in which he had taken a great interest. A little while before the end he noticed that all was still outside, where the boys had been giving noisy vent to the prevailing spirit of the day. He hoped they had not stopped on his account; he liked to hear it. His country in his heart till the latest breath, and with that heart’s latest beat. A life with such a beginning and so sweet an ending has its lesson for us all. To us, personally, it is a delight tinged with whatever of sadness to commend that lesson to the Free Press circle of readers.

The funeral was from the family home in Green street, Tuesday, July 6, Rev. Grant L. Shaeffer of the Congregational church officiating. The attendance was large, especially of business men, stores being generally closed for the hour. The casket was literally banked in floral tributes. Pastor Shaeffer paid tender and befitting tribute to the character of the deceased. His message to the surviving veterans of the civil war, about twenty, who attended in a body and performed escort duty, was timely and beautiful, and appreciated by all who heard it. Burial was in School street cemetery, nearby to many near and distant relations, all of the same stock as Admiral Dewey. The pall bearers were C. S. Ford, C. E. Cooper, C. S. Davis and C. E. Hildreth. Honorary bearers, George C. Perkins, W. S. Carter, C. B. Comings, E. S. Haskell—Past Commanders of the Post. Among those present from out of town was Gen. J. N. Patterson of Concord. A large number of letters of condolence have been received by Mrs. Dewey, including Edward L. Bailey, Colonel of the Second Regiment, Hon. M. L. Morrison of Peterborough, and the offices of the Granite State Insurance Company of Portsmouth and the New Hampshire Fire Insurance Company of Manchester. Captain Dewey had represented both companies a long term of years. We append the following extract from Col. Bailey's letter:

"I would be glad to find words fitting to express my deep sympathy for you in the dire bereavement you have sustained, but I have learned from my own sad experience that mere words are inadequate. It may however be a consolation to feel that others suffer with you in the loss of a tried and true friend. My friendship and esteem for your husband was formed upon a basis of unusual trials and hardships such as refine and determine character as naught else can. As a soldier he was always at his post of duty, reliable, trustworthy and brave. As a man he was notable for his modesty, his retiring disposition, and upright character. We of his comrades who are left will miss him. Yet I know how little this must be in comparison to the measure of your own loss. Time alone can soften and assuage the grief that overwhelsms. I trust that a merciful Providence may come to your aid."

The following beautiful sentiment was sent by Major David E. Proctor of Wilton:

"His march is done, his camp is here,
    His tent among the blest,
The bugle's wild and warlike blast
    Is simply sounding 'Rest.'
We place the flag upon his breast,
    That flag he fought to save;
May it now guard his final rest
    As it waves above his grave."

Dickey, David G., Co. B, died en route, September 6, 1912.

The funeral of David G. Dickey, a resident of West Milford, was held yesterday, Sept. 9, at South Lyndeborough, the Rev. Mr. Donovan officiating. Members of Lull Post, G. A. R., of which he was a member, attended and performed the Grand Army ritual at the grave. Mr. Dickey died suddenly while en route from Maine to his home here. He was a member of Company B, Second New Hampshire Volunteers. He was born in 1836, in Deerinct, and came to Lyndeborough in 1864, where he was superintendent of the town farm. About ten years ago he removed to West Milford. He married, for his second wife, Nellie E. Kenison, who survives him.

Dickey, Lyman A., Co. I, died Londonderry, December 8, 1915.

Lyman A. Dickey, a well-known resident of Derry, Manchester and Londonderry for many years, and a veteran of the Civil war, died at his home in Londonderry just before noon today, aged 75 years. Mr. Dickey was born in Southbridge, Vt., October 20, 1840. After coming to New Hampshire he passed twenty-five or more years in Manchester, where he operated a blacksmith shop for a long time, later living a year or so in Derry, and the last five years had been spent in Londonderry, where he devoted what time he was able to work to farming work.

Mr. Dickey enlisted in 1861 in Company 1, Second New Hampshire volunteers and served over three years. He was a member of Wesley B. Knight Post, G. A. R., under whose auspices the funeral will be held on Friday forenoon at 11 o'clock, in St. Luke's Methodist church, Derry, and to which all friends are invited, and burial will be in the Stowell yard at Manchester. Mr. Dickey had been in poor health all summer, and the last few weeks was confined to his home. Bright’s disease is ascribed as the cause of his death. Besides his wife, Mrs. Harrietta Dickey, he is survived by three sons, Nelson H. Dickey of Derry, William G. Dickey and George L. Dickey of Londonderry; one daughter, Carrie M. Dickey of Londonderry; a brother, George Dickey, living in Texas; a sister, Mrs. Nellie M. Sawyer of North Weare; and five grandchildren.

DOW, GEORGE E., Co. F, died Tilton, February 9, 1904.

DOWNS, CHARLES A., Chaplain, died Lebanon, September 20, 1906.

DREW, DANA L., Co. D, died Dover, November 25, 1915.

Dana L. Drew died at his home here today. He had been a resident of this city for the past two months, coming here from Strafford. He was born in Ossipee in 1845. He is survived by his wife and one brother, Chesley Drew of this city; one nephew, Aaron Drew; and three nieces, Mrs. Winfield Twombly of Lawrence, Mass., Mrs. William Ellison of Barrington and Mrs. George Bennett of Farmington. Mr. Drew was a civil war veteran. He enlisted on the first day of June, 1861, with Company D, Second Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers, and served three years. He was mustered out on June 21, 1864. On December 29, 1864, he re-enlisted with Company E, First Massachusetts Regiment, and was mustered out on June 3, 1865. He was in the battle of Gettysburg, the battle of Bull Run and the battle of the Wilderness. He has also served as deputy sheriff of Strafford county.

DOVER, Nov. 28.—The funeral services of ex-Deputy Sheriff Dana L. Drew, who died at his home, 46 New York street, in this city, on Wednesday evening, took place at his late residence yesterday afternoon at 2 o’clock. The services were conducted by Rev. E. R. Amazeen. The pall bearers were Nicholas Tolmay, Thomas Tolmay, James Wood and Alvan Mitchell. The remains lay in state at his home from 12 to 2 o’clock, at which a large number of friends and neighbors called to view the remains. Burial took place in the family lot in Pine Hill cemetery.

DUNTON, WILLIAM, Co. A, died Fitzwilliam, October 31, 1901.

William Dunton committed suicide at his home here yesterday by shooting himself thro’ the heart. He was a farmer, about 77 years of age, well known and highly respected. Ever since the death of his wife, last April, he had been a victim of melancholia, and his friends believe that he grieved over her loss until his mind became affected. For nearly thirty years Mr. Dunton’s has been one of the most remarkable surgical cases on record. He was among the first to enter the army from Fitzwilliam in 1861, and at the second battle of Bull Run almost the entire roof of his mouth was shot away. His recovery was at first thought impossible, but skillful surgery saved his life, and although he was more or less inconvenienced by the loss of his palate, he was nevertheless in the enjoyment of good health. He had a fine army record, and since the war had prospered as a farmer.

DURGIN, ABNER F., Co. E, died Concord, January 5, 1902.

EASTMAN, CHARLES H., Co. F, died Conway, July 31, 1906.
Muster Out Roll

His home was in Fryeburg, Me., but he died suddenly at the house of a comrade whom he was visiting in Conway. Says the Independent Statesman: "John Langdon Eastman, who died at Fryeburg, Maine, last week, was a member of the Eastman family of this city and fought for three years in the Civil War with the Second N. H. regiment."

Eastman, Philip C., Co. E, died National Military Home, Togus, Me., March 17, 1908.

Philip C. Eastman, familiarly known as "Phip," a member of the Second New Hampshire Volunteers, who was a general favorite with the members of the regiment, died Tuesday at the Togus, Me., Soldiers' Home. He was a native of Boscawen, where he was born July 14, 1842, and early followed the trade of a Sawyer. At the outbreak of the civil war he was one of the first to offer his services, volunteering April 20, 1861, for three months. He was not mustered in, but on May 21 he again volunteered and was enrolled as a member of Company E, Second regiment, Captain Leonard Brown, for three years. His captain was killed at Williamsburg. Eastman was mustered into the service June 3, 1861, as wagoner, served three years, and re-enlisted February 19, 1864, appointed sergeant Nov. 10, 1865, and was mustered out December 19 of the same year. He was a most remarkable horseman, and was employed the greater part of his time as a volunteer as wagoner and wagon master. His feats of driving, both during the war and after his return, were most remarkable and aroused much interest. He was for several years in charge of the Eagle hotel stables in Concord. During the war he was a close friend to Mr. Charles E. Foster of this city [Manchester,] who was brought into close contact with Mr. Eastman during the latter part of the war, as Mr. Foster was forage master, while Mr. Eastman was wagon master. Following the close of the war, from August to December, the deceased was wagon master for the sub-district of Essex under General J. N. Patterson, who was recently recommended for pension agent at Concord. Mr. Eastman was admitted to the Soldiers' Home at Togus, November 10, 1906.

Eaton, John, Jr., Co. E, died Manchester, March 22, 1897.

Mustered out, March 18, John A. Emerson, at the age of 66 years. He was born in Alexandria and left an orphan at the age of three years. His early life was spent in that vicinity. Robbed by death of the tender care and love of parents, the neglect and misuse common to the lot of an orphan in those days, coming from those who professed Christianity, warped and embittered his mind, but as he grew older he was able to win his way to success as one of the most successful shoemakers of his day. His honesty and unswerving purpose made him respected by all, while his jovial ways and good nature endeared him to his friends. His record as a soldier in the civil war is highly commendable. He enlisted from Bristol, June 3, 1861, in Company E of the Second N. H. Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged June 3, 1865. He was captured at Gettysburg and spent nearly two years in prison, and the privations which he endured there were in a large measure responsible for the great suffering he has borne with such patience the past year. The last three months he had been confined to his home. Funeral services were held at the residence Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Rev. A. H. Drury was the officiating clergyman, and Mrs. Leona Waldron sang in an acceptable manner the hymns, "Like a Bird on the Deep" and "After." His was an affectionate nature, and his love for home and family was true and deep, and he will be greatly missed by friends and family alike. He is survived by a widow, three sons, Horion C., Frank A., Chester B., and a daughter, Mrs. C. E. Baker. Interment was in the village cemetery, and the bearers were Fred Tenney, Freeman Nutter, C. E. Eaton and G. H. Crosby.

EMERSON, Quincy A., died Soldiers Home, Tilton, Nov. 23, 1893.

FISHER, Sumner P., Co. B, died Munsonville, November, 1910.

FITTS, John L., Co. B, died Candia, October 7, 1912.

John Lane Fitts, another of Candia's much respected and public spirited citizens, died at his pleasant home on High street, Monday morning, October 7. A veteran of the Civil war, he enlisted in the Second New Hampshire regiment. Early in the war he was captured and confined in Libby prison, where he experienced all the privations and hardships of prison life. Mr. Fitts was a familiar figure at the Rockingham county probate court, having been engaged in settling estates for the people of his home town. He was a valued member of the Congregational church. He is survived by an adopted daughter, Mrs. John Stearns of Candia High street.

CANDIA, Oct. 9.—The funeral services of John Lane Fitts this afternoon at his home so long occupied by him, drew a large concourse of his fellow citizens. Twenty-five members of Louis Bell Post, G. A. R., came from Manchester in a large touring car. Eulogies were pronounced by the Rev. A. H. Thompson of Raymond, an old friend of the family, and by the Rev. James H. Scott, his pastor. He paid a high tribute to Mr. Fitts as a church member, joining in 1849 at 14, and as a citizen. Mr. Thompson took as his text, "And Enoch walked with God; and he was not, for God took him." He spoke of the admirable ancestry of Mr. Fitts, his army experience in Company E, Second New Hampshire, his experience in southern prisons for fifteen months after the battle of Bull Run, his return from the war after being mustered out, his good citizenship, his sterling qualities as shown in the home and in the educational and moral life of Candia. At the Candia Hill cemetery, near the church, a delegation from Leola lodge, No. 70, I. O. O. F., conducted its services. The ritual services of the Grand Army were conducted by Commander John F. Clough of Louis Bell post, with a firing squad under command of Captain F. H. Challis. The bearers were Odd Fellows, Charles Fifield, Jerry Rollins, Roger Brown and John Hobbs. The floral tributes were beautiful, and the flag he loved was also in evidence. Rev. Mr. Scott gave the benediction.

Mr. Fitts was born in Candia, December 8, 1834. His brother was the late Rev. James H. Fitts, who died in Newfields, November 22, 1900, at 71. His parents were John Fitts (1794-1876) and Abigail Lane of Candia (1789-1882.)

FLINT, Henry A., Co. F. Letter addressed to him at Island Pond, Vt., in 1913, returned with P. O. indorsement, "Deceased."

FOLSOM, Peaslee H., Co. F, died Gilford, November 8, 1885.

SUNCOOK, Jan. 4.—The funeral of Edward W. Forrest was held from his late home on Glass street this afternoon at 1 o'clock. The officiating clergyman was Elder Arthur Shirley of Manchester, who spoke of Mr. Forrest's early life. At the age of 18 he enlisted in the Second Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, Company H, and served three years. For the past forty years he had been a resident of this town, and in feeble health for only a few days. The bearers were George Koford, Elder Arthur Shirley, Arthur Shepard and F. W. Morse.
Foster, Charles E., Co. G, died Manchester, November 7, 1915.

Charles E. Foster, who served during the Civil War for a longer period than any other man from New Hampshire, four years and eight months, and who enjoyed the friendship of Gen. Robert E. Lee, gained through daily intercourse with the Confederate chieftain for several weeks, died today at his home in the Tewksbury block, aged 72. He leaves a wife, a half-sister, Mrs. Ella F. Adams of Concord Junction, Mass., and a cousin, Charles Bullard of Peterborough.

Mr. Foster was born in Bennington, March 16, 1844. On April 20, 1861, he enlisted in Peterborough for the war, under Captain Ephraim Weston. He was discharged May 15, 1861, and at once re-enlisted, serving for three years; and then, in January, 1864, was enrolled for another three years, receiving his final discharge December 25, 1865. He served in Co. G, Second New Hampshire regiment, three full years, and was then put on detached service. For a month he was an ambulance driver, was promoted to sergeant, then became wagon master in the 3d Division, 24th Army Corps ambulance train, and also served as commissary-sergeant and as forage master.

Mr. Foster took part in the first and second battles of Bull Run, Williamsburg, Gettysburg, Drewry's Bluff, Evansport, Oak Grove, Fredericksburg, Wapping Heights, Swift Creek and Cold Harbor. He was confined in Libby prison for four months, and was then exchanged. He was under fire for one hundred consecutive days in front of Petersburg.

It was while serving as wagon master that Mr. Foster made the acquaintance of Gen. Lee. He was ordered to furnish an ambulance wagon to go to Gen. Lee's residence in Richmond daily and provide conveyance for the General's daughter to visit the hospitals at Camp Lee and Camp Jackson, and this brought him into contact with the Confederate leader. Describing an incident of this acquaintance, Mr. Foster once said: "I had opportunity to speak with Gen. Lee many times, and one day, having observed a pile of heavy dragoon sabers piled up inside a fence between Gen. Lee's residence and one of the outbuildings, I said to him, 'If you don't mind, General, I would like one of those sabers as a souvenir.' 'I don't suppose it would make any difference whether I minded or not,' he replied with a quiet smile, 'I answered that I didn't know about that, and proceeded to select one of the sabers, to which he made no objection.' That sword was left by Mr. Foster among his effects.

After the war Mr. Foster resided at different times in Peterborough, Keene, Harrisville, Marlow, Vt.; Greenfield, Brattleboro, Fitchburg, Springfield, Boston and Providence, coming to Manchester to reside in 1876, and this city was ever after his home. He held membership in Aaron F. Stevens Post, G. A. R., of Peterborough; Alvin H. Libby Command, Union Veterans' Union, of which he was at one time colonel, and was appointed chief of staff of the National Commandery with the rank of brigadier general. He was a member of Union Veteran Legion Encampment of Worcester, Mass.; was president of the Prisoners of War Association for three years; a member of the Second Regiment Association of New Hampshire, and custodian of the regimental building at Weirs for 26 years. He was on the executive committee of the New Hampshire Veterans Association, and a member of the Manchester War Veterans, serving as commander for two terms. He also held membership in the Third Army Corps Association and the Society of the Army of the Potomac. Mr. Foster for many years kept a daily record of the weather which he gave to the daily press. His body will be forwarded to Bennington for burial.

Bennington, N. H., Nov. 10.—Charles E. Foster, who died at Manchester Sunday, was buried here today. Services were held at the Congregational church, Rev. Andrew Gibson officiating. Col. Bailey of Manchester gave the eulogy. Frank W. Butler Camp, S. of V., and the Ladies' Auxiliary attended in a body. The bearers, from Frank W. Butler Camp, were Leon Messer, Ralph E. Messer, Henry W. Wilson, John Scott, George Griswold and Fred Bartlett. The honorary bearers were from the Peterborough Post, G. A. R., and included Comrades Crosby, Morrison, Morse and McCoy. The trumpeter was Arthur Dimond of Troop A of the State Cavalry. Burial was at Sunnyside Cemetery.

Frank Fuller, war governor of Utah, lawyer, dentist, physician, friend of Lincoln, intimate of Mark Twain, and one of the most widely known characters of this city and the United States, died of old age this afternoon in his apartments at the Hotel Irving, 26 Gramercy Park, in his 88th year. He was one of the few men who had lived and been part of the history of this country and had been in touch with events of national import.

Dr. Fuller was born in Boston. His father, John Smith Fuller, was once a deacon in Dr. Lyman Beecher's church and a noted biblical scholar. As soon as he was able to decide for himself, Frank Fuller made up his mind to become a doctor. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes selected Dr. Benjamin Hubbard of Plymouth, Mass., as his preceptor, because he had a drugstore, and Dr. Fuller studied under him. Later, he studied dentistry under John Gunn, one of the best dentists of his time and of whose will his father was the executor. Dr. Fuller next became a newspaper man, more by accident than by his own decision. His brother, Edward Fuller, was a printer on the Dover Gazette and sent for him to come and help him out, and he remained with the paper until he had thoroughly mastered the business.

In 1860, when Dr. Fuller was practising dentistry in Portsmouth, he began making speeches for the Republican party and became prominent in politics. Robert T. Lincoln, son of Abraham Lincoln, was then at school at Phillips Exeter Academy, and when Dr. Fuller was asked to deliver a Fourth of July oration he asked that young Lincoln be called upon to read the Declaration of Independence. Lincoln agreed to do so if his father would permit, and Dr. Fuller wired to Mr. Lincoln, and his reply, received next day, gave the permission, saying, "Tell Robert to take every occasion to read the immortal document, and the bigger the crowd the louder he must holler." Shortly after this Dr. Fuller attended a convention in Cleveland, where he met Abraham Lincoln for the first time.

When the war broke out Dr. Fuller assisted in organizing the Second New Hampshire regiment, of which he was in the beginning paymaster, quartermaster, and, to use his own words, "inspector of cooks and protector against coffee strong enough to kill." He went with his regiment to Washington, and then came another change in his life.

Governor Cummings of Utah had been reported missing at that time and President Lincoln was much worried over the situation in that territory. Senator John P. Hale of New Hampshire took Dr. Fuller to the White House and suggested to the President that he appoint him Governor of Utah in place of the missing Governor. Because he feared Cummings might return, Mr. Lincoln appointed Dr. Fuller secretary of Utah, with the salary of Governor, and sent him to take charge of that territory. The understanding was that if Cummings never returned (and he never did) Dr. Fuller was to be appointed governor, and thus became the wartime chief executive of Utah, which was then having much trouble with Brigham Young and his Mormons. The governor was able to avoid friction by taking a firm stand for the enforcement of the laws, and the result was that conditions in Utah were better during the evil times of the civil war than ever before.

When the Pacific Telegraph Company completed the first telegraph line into Salt Lake City, in October, 1861, Dr. Fuller sent the first message, a dispatch to President Lincoln, to which the President replied, saying: "The completion of the telegraph to Salt Lake is auspicious of the stability and union of the republic. The government reciprocates your congratulations."

Dr. Fuller first met Mark Twain in Nevada when he lived in the little camp which was the home of Gov. Nye of Nevada, whom he was visiting. On this trip Dr. Fuller was admitted to the bar of Nevada, the motion to admit being made by the late Senator Wm. M. Stewart. Mark Twain at that time was working on the Territorial Enterprise of Virginia City. Dr. Fuller and the author became intimate friends, and years after, when Mark Twain first came to New York after his first successful lecture tour in California, he called on the former Governor at his office at 25 Broadway. With the assistance of Dr. Fuller, arrangements were made for the first Twain lectures, which took place at Cooper Union. Before the lecture an incident occurred typical of both Mark Twain and Dr. Fuller. In speaking of it in later years Dr. Fuller said:

"Mark was a very fine dresser and thought that his ordinary sack suit would be good..."
enough to lecture in. I told him he must wear evening dress and he said he had never worn a clawhammer in his life. I put a first-class tailor on the job and made Mark get a suitable collar and necktie. When the clothes came Mark put them on and rehearsed in my office, and as he rehearsed he raisedavor the tailor who had sewed up the button holes so that he couldn't button his coat. I told him that it was not customary to button a dress coat. He pointed to my engraving of Daniel Webster and sarcastically asked who knew best, Daniel Webster or a scrub of a tailor? He then asked if I knew of any other man who habitually wore evening dress, and I told him I did. He then grabbed the scissors and cut the stitches closing the button holes, and buttoning the coat, remarked, 'Now there are three of us,' and so garbed he spoke his piece when the time came.'

Dr. Fuller established the Health Food Company at 25 Lexington avenue in 1874, of which he was president until his death. With his wife, who died in 1906, he was in the Windsor Hotel fire, in which eighty-four of their friends lost their lives, and from which they escaped unhurt. A son, Louis R. Fuller, survives him.

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 22.—The funeral of Dr. Frank Fuller, war governor of Utah, lawyer, dentist, physician, friend of Lincoln, intimate of Mark Twain, and one of the most widely known characters in the United States, who died a few days ago from old age in New York, was held yesterday afternoon at the Universalist church, Rev. Alfred Gooding officiating. De Witt Clinton commandery, K. T., was present and held the services of the lodge, as did a delegation representing St. John's lodge, A. F. and A. M. Interment was in the family lot in Harmony Grove cemetery under the direction of O. W. Ham. Dr. Fuller practiced dentistry in this city over fifty years ago and had frequently visited here since. When the Civil war broke out he assisted in organizing the Second New Hampshire regiment, and later, when Governor Cummings of Utah disappeared, he was appointed governor of that territory by President Lincoln.

FARMINGTON, Me., Aug. 10.—The funeral of John Henry Goodwin took place this afternoon at the home at Farmington Falls, Rev. J. P. Barrett of West Farmington officiating. Mr. Goodwin was a veteran of the civil war and a member of John F. Appleton post, G. A. R., of this place. His wife died in 1908. The bearers were the four sons, Cyrus H., John F. and Ruel W. of Farmington, and Charles B. of Fort Edward, N. Y. Interment was in Franklin Cemetery here.

GOODWIN, WILLIAM H., Co. K. True name William Goodwin Quint. Drowned at Portsmouth bridge, June 19, 1864.

GORDON, HENRY M., Co. E. Letter addressed to him at Morrisville, Vt., in 1913, returned with P. O. indorsement, "deceased."

GORDON, JOSEPH E., Co. K, died Portsmouth, April 12, 1897.

Maj. Daniel W. Gould, formerly of Chelsea, died this morning at the home of his niece, Mrs. Elmer D. Howe, on Union street, where he has lived for the past year. He was 77 years old. Major Gould was a veteran of the Civil War, in which he lost an arm; a former member of the New Hampshire legislature, a former alderman in Chelsea, and commander-in-chief of the Union Veterans' Union.

He was born in Peterborough, N. H., August 10, 1838, the son of Gilman and Mersylvania (Walton) Gould. He was educated in the public schools of his native town and spent three years in the law office of R. B. Hatch there. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted at Peterborough in the Second New Hampshire Infantry, and was mustered into service at Portsmouth on June 16, 1861. He was first under fire at Bull Run. In the battle of Williamsburg, in May, 1862, he was wounded twice, once in the leg, where he carried the bullet all his life, and in the left arm, which it was necessary to amputate.

After the war he returned to Peterborough, where he served as town clerk and in 1872-73 was a member of the New Hampshire legislature. In 1874 he was appointed a clerkship in the United States Treasury Department at Washington. He moved to Chelsea in 1876, where he was appointed inspector of customs at the Boston custom house. He served as an alderman in Chelsea for several terms.

He was a charter member of Aaron F. Stevens Post, No. 6, G. A. R., of Peterboro', and of W. S. Hancock Command, No. 1, U. V. U., of Chelsea, of which organization he was twice department commander of Massachusetts. He was judge advocate of the National Command of the U. V. U. in 1889, and later quartermaster-general of the Massachusetts division. In 1904 he was elected commander-in-chief of the U. V. U. He was also a prominent Mason, Odd Fellow and Knight Templar.

Major Gould's wife, who was Miss Maria Symonds of Rindge, N. H., died two years ago. They had no children. He leaves a sister, Mrs. Sarah G. Royce of Stoughton.

There will be two funeral services, one at 2:30 Sunday afternoon at the home of his niece, Mrs. Howe, in this city, and one on Monday, at 11:30 a.m., in the Unitarian church at Peterborough, N. H. Rev. Dr. R. Perry Bush of Chelsea will conduct the service at Peterborough. The burial will be in that town.

Gowdey, Edwin M., Co. F, died May 9, 1907.

Grandy, Emery W., Co. A. Letter addressed to him at Hillsborough Bridge in 1913 returned with indorsement, "Deceased."

Gravlin, Peter, Co. E, died Greensboro' Bend, Vt., date unknown.

Clarence S. Gray of Kingston, living just across the Exeter line, near what is known as Great Hill, died at his home there late last night at the age of 74 years. He was a native of Portsmouth, being born June 23, 1838, and at the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion enlisted as a member of the Second New Hampshire regiment. He served through the greater part of the war as corporal, but returned as a first lieutenant. He was a member of Moses N. Collins Post, G. A. R., of Exeter, and by vocation was a mason. He is survived by a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Samuel Y. Davis of Exeter and Lenora Gray of Kingston. Funeral services will be at the home on Saturday at 1 o'clock.

HAINES, ISAIAH F., CO. E, died Exeter, September 17, 1879.

HALL, ALBERT L., CO. I, died Newport, July 28, 1911.

NEWPORT, July 31.—Albert L. Hall, who died from a complication of diseases, including pleurisy and Bright’s disease, was buried this afternoon at 2 o’clock in the Maple Street cemetery. Many old friends and comrades attended.

Mr. Hall, who had been prominent in the political and business life of Newport for the past twenty years, was born in Blue Hill, Me., July 17, 1839. At an early age he left home and came to Cornish. From here, he enlisted in Company I, Second New Hampshire volunteers, at the first call of President Lincoln for volunteers, April 28, 1861, at the age of 21. At the battle of Bull Run, while endeavoring to carry a comrade to the rear, he was captured and held a prisoner until May 24, 1862, when he was paroled, and was discharged July 2. At the close of the war he settled in Lebanon and from there came to Newport in the early 70’s. Mr. Hall had been prominent in G. A. R affairs and held different offices. He also entered politics in a small way, and at the time of his death was register of deeds. About a year ago, Mr. Hall got a nervous shock and since then he had been gradually failing. He is survived by a wife and a sister, who live in Newport.

HALL, ISAAC G., CO. D, died Dover, January 4, 1911.

Isaac G. Hall, one of Dover’s oldest and best known residents, died today at his home, 10 West Concord street, aged 83 years, 1 month and 7 days. He had been confined to his bed only six weeks, and up to a short time ago, was exceedingly active for a man of his advanced age. Mr. Hall was born in Dover, where he spent practically his entire life. At the age of fourteen he entered the employ of the Cocheco Manufacturing company, retiring from the position of boss weaver at the age of seventy. He was a Civil war veteran, a member of the Second New Hampshire regiment, and served almost all through that great conflict. Mr. Hall was regarded as one of Dover’s best citizens, and in early life was active in many movements looking to the improvement of local conditions. He was one of the oldest members of Strafford lodge of Masons, and besides a widow leaves three grandchildren, Mrs. Fred Frary, Mrs. Pitt Roberts and Fred Blanchard.

HAMMOND, JOHN W., CO. A, died Winchester, February 1, 1914.

HANNAFORD, ALONZO M., CO. G, died Roodhouse, Ill., May 26, 1912.

Alonzo M. Hannaford, a veteran of Company G, Second New Hampshire volunteers in the Civil War, died in Roodhouse, Ill., May 26, at the age of 71. He was buried in the western city with full G. A. R. honors.

HARRIMAN, ALLEN O., CO. F, died Conway, January 19, 1915.

HARTWELL, JOHN H., CO. A, died September 27, 1912.

HAYES, CHARLES H., CO. B, died Concord, May 25, 1908.

Passed away in this city, late yesterday afternoon, Charles H. Hayes, a well known and highly respected veteran of this city, aged 71 years and 15 days. Mr. Hayes was born in Concord, May 10, 1837, and had always resided here. He was a member of Sturtevant post, No. 2, G.A.R., and was very prominent in G.A.R. circles. For several years he held the office of chaplain of the post. He enlisted at Concord, when he was 24 years old, in Company B, Second New Hampshire Volunteers, August 6, 1862, and was in most of the engagements in which this regiment took part. He was discharged June 9, 1865, at Man-
Heath, Va. He was also a member of Rumford Lodge, I.O.O.F., and had been an employee of the Abbott-Downing company for the past 54 years. He will be greatly missed by his comrades and many friends. He is survived by one son, Harry F. Hayes of Penacook. The funeral services will take place at the parlors of Kendall & Foster, Thursday.

EAST ROCHESTER, Sept. 21.—John Hayes, aged about 74, died at his home on the West Lebanon road last night after many months' illness. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hayes and was born in the Blaisdell's Corner district. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted with the Second New Hampshire regiment and served through the entire war. He is survived by a wife, Mrs. Adelaide Cowell Hayes.

Haynes, Alba C., Co. G, died Lancaster, November 25, 1905.

Alba C. Haynes was born in Wentworth, the son of Mahurin and Lucy (Clifford) Haynes. He died in Lancaster, where he had lived 22 years, November 25, 1905, at the age of 67 years. In 1861 he enlisted in the Second New Hampshire regiment and saw four years of service. Two years of that time he was the color-bearer. Returning from the war, he married, and his widow survives him, with two daughters, Mrs. Lloyd Hartford of Millinocket, Me., and Mrs. William D. Thompson, employed in the Coos County Democrat office at Lancaster. An only son is deceased. He was in railroad service for twenty-two years, and at the time of his death was superintendent of the Lancaster water system.

NATIONAL SOLDIERS' HOME, TENNESSEE, March 24, 1917.—Dear Sir: In reply to your letter of the 21st instant you are informed that Edwin D. Haynes, late lieutenant H and D companies, Second New Hampshire Infantry, who was formerly a member of the Southern Branch, National Home for D.V.S., died at this Branch while a member, on August 10, 1914, the cause of his death being Chronic Cystitis. Notice of his death was sent to Mrs. Verti Haynes, his wife, at Johnson City, Tenn., the person named by him to be notified in event of his death. Respectfully, John P. Smith, Governor.

Heath, Charles N., Co. B, died Chichester, February 9, 1898.

[There can be little doubt that this is Charles N. Heath of Company B.] PITTSFIELD, Feb. 11.—Late Tuesday afternoon a stranger tramping through this section called at the farm home of Anthony Lane in Chichester and requested a drink of water. His request was readily complied with and he then asked and was granted permission to remain over night. In the morning he failed to come from the room he occupied at the proper time and an investigation revealed the fact that he was helpless and unconscious. His condition indicated that he was suffering from a stroke of paralysis and a physician was at once summoned, Medical attendance availed nothing and in a few hours he was dead. From an old letter it was learned that his name was Charles A. Heath and that he had a guardian in the northern part of the state, with whom communication was had by wire and authority obtained to give the remains a decent burial. Accordingly undertaker Tuck was summoned from this place and internment took place at the Pine Ground cemetery yesterday afternoon. Heath was apparently about sixty years of age and was a veteran of the late war.

Heath, John, Co. C, died December 4, 1906.

Heath, Oren, Co. C, died Chatham, date unknown.
Heath, Thorndike P., Co. I, died Manchester, Nov. 13, 1914.

Thorndike P. Heath, a veteran of the civil war, died tonight at his home, 280 Pearl street, aged 81. He was born in Boscawen, and had resided in this city since a boy. He served as a sergeant in Company I, Second New Hampshire regiment, until September, 1862, when he was commissioned as second-lieutenant in the Eleventh New Hampshire. At the close of the war he entered the employ of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company and was with it for many years.

[Personal sketch printed in 1913.—Deacon T. P. Heath, one of the founders of the People’s Baptist church, has passed his 80th birthday anniversary, and the occasion was remembered by his friends, many of whom called upon him at his home, 280 Pearl street. He received many gifts and a post card shower. Deacon Heath is in splendid health. He has a garden in Goffstown, a mile from the electric car line, and goes to and from it daily, doing his work and bringing away loads of produce that some younger men wouldn’t want to carry. He has always been an active, energetic man, and at 80 years he is vigorous.

Mr. Heath has a fine war record. He enlisted in the Second New Hampshire regiment and was in one of the two companies at Bull Run that, near the close of the fight, charged a confederate battery and fought the cannon with muskets. At Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862, he got a wound in the shoulder and was sent home. Here he received a commission as lieutenant in the Eleventh and served for the remainder of the war in that regiment. He was in the battle of Fredericksburg, and last April, while on a trip to Washington, he visited the battleground.

Mr. Heath assisted in erecting the pole on Merrimack common for the famous muster in 1856, and put the copper fireman on the top of it. While on a furlough, during the war, he put a flag at the top of the pole, and it was flying there when he came home at the end of the war.

Heaton, George S., Co. A, died Portsmouth, February 1, 1906.

George S. Heaton, a native and long time resident of Keene, died in Portsmouth February 21, aged 64 years. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted in Company A, Second N. H. regiment. He was wounded in the first battle of Bull Run and lay for nine days upon the field, subsisting on food furnished by neighboring negroes. He with other wounded soldiers were picked up by rebel soldiers and carried to Libby prison, where he remained several months. In August, 1862, he was discharged for disability.

Hemphill, Loren D., Co. B, died April 19, 1901.

Hill, George H., Co. B, buried in Blossom Hill cemetery, Concord; date of death unknown.

Hinds, Charles J., Co. D, died Westmoreland, April 20, 1914.

Keene, April 21.—Charles J. Hinds of 514 Court street, this city, a civil war veteran, died at the Maplewood Home, in Westmoreland, yesterday after a long illness, aged 75. He served in Company G, Tenth New Hampshire regiment. For many years he was a veterinary surgeon in Keene and vicinity. The body will be brought to this city and buried in the G. A. R. lot in Woodland Cemetery.

Rochester, July 20.—This afternoon, at the residence on the Meaderboro rd., occurred the funeral of John F. Hobbs, a veteran of the civil war, and it was very largely attended. Delegations were in attendance from Sampson post, G. A. R., of this city, and Crown Point grange of Strafford Corner. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Leroy Famsworth, pastor of the Free Baptist church at Strafford Corner. There was a very large and beautiful floral tribute. Interment was in the family lot in the Kimball cemetery, Meaderboro rd.

Knights, Robert, Co. B, died Stewartstown, 1892.

Groveland, Mass., Sept. 11, 1910.—To the O. C.—A friend in Manchester sent me a Union of Sept. 5th with the piece about the signature on a letter written by Perkins C. Lane and asking what became of him. He went to Chicopee Falls with Charles Fish, was there when Henry Bailey came there. He left Chicopee Falls January 1, 1903. He went to Boston to the hospital in the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea, Mass., September 10, 1909, and died there March 31, 1910, of Bright's disease. He was buried in Forest Hills cemetery April 4. His age was 70 years, 19 days. From his widow, Mrs. Harriet J. Lane, Cannon Hill Avenue.

Lang, Charles A., Co. B, died Harrison, Me., January 1, 1913.

Lang, Thomas M., Co. B, died Penacook, May 5, 1909.

Thomas Madison Lang, prominent in insurance circles in New Hampshire and a veteran of the civil war, died at the residence of Dr. H. C. Holbrook, in Penacook, Wednesday night, at the age of 73 years. He was a native of Georgetown, Mass., but was a resident of Boscawen when the war broke out, from which place he enlisted in Company B, Second New Hampshire regiment, on May 22, 1861. He was mustered into the service June 1, 1861, as a private, and was appointed corporal on December 1 of the same year. He was wounded at the battle of Oak Grove, Va., June 25, 1862, and was discharged by reason of disability at Philadelphia, March 23, 1863. He then came to this city, where he continued to reside. He served as Register of Deeds for the county of Merrimack, as tax collector for the city of Concord, and was several years a clerk in the Pension Agency, following the establishment of the office in the government building.

Twenty-five years ago he became associated with Lyman Jackman in the insurance business, and was interested in several of the New Hampshire companies formed to protect the State following the withdrawal of the foreign companies on the passage by the legislature of the valued policy law. He was a director of the Capital Fire, and also in the Underwriters and Manufacturers and Merchants Mutual. He was also for several years treasurer of the New Hampshire Fire Underwriters' Association.

He was a member and Past Commander of Sturtevant post, G.A.R., and he was affiliated with the order of Odd Fellows. He enjoyed a wide acquaintance and was held in the highest respect by his friends and associates. A brother, C. A. Lang of Harrison, Me., and a sister, Mrs. Abbie Green of Boscawen, survive.

Langmaid, Joseph G., Co. K, died Strafford Co. Farm, April, 1910.

Lawrence, Richard A., Co. C, died Manchester, April 7, 1908.

Lees, Thomas, Co. B, died Wolfeborough, July 12, 1896.
LE GRO, Eben, Co. D, died East Rochester, December 6, 1910.

Eben Le Gro, who died at East Rochester yesterday while walking in the road near Adams corner, was a war veteran and one of the best known citizens of East Rochester. The funeral will be held at the home on next Saturday. His son, George, who is conductor on a Pullman car in Texas, is expected home Saturday morning.

LEWIS, Cornelius, Co. I. Buried in Calvary cemetery, Concord; date of death unknown.

Captain James I. Locke, one of the two local survivors of the first battle of Bull Run, died at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Winfield S. Abbott, on Green street, last evening, in his 77th year. Captain Locke was a member of Co. K, Second New Hampshire Volunteers, serving under General Gilman Marston, and took part in many engagements, going through the first battle of Bull Run without a wound, but later was wounded at Cold Harbor. He went out as a private, enlisting from Portsmouth, and was promoted to the rank of captain during his service.

At the close of the war he lived for a time in Michigan, but came east later and had resided in Portsmouth with a sister much of the time, alternating between that city and Exeter. He was born in Portsmouth December 28, 1839. He was a member of Moses N. Collins Post, G. A. R., of Exeter, and a well known and respected citizen. Survivors are a sister and a son, the latter living near Boston. While in Exeter he followed the vocation of a carpenter.

LONG, Michael E., Co. K, died Portsmouth, May 25, 1913.

Michael E. Long, one of Portsmouth's best known citizens, was found dead in bed this morning, having died of heart trouble during the night. He had been in failing health for several months. He was born in Salem, Mass., February 9, 1840, the son of Thomas L. and Margaret Long. His parents moved to Portsmouth when he was two weeks old and opened a lodging house. He was educated at the local public schools and at the old academy. He went to work as a young man in the navy yard. In 1863 he enlisted in Co. K, Second New Hampshire Volunteers and gave three years of faithful service.

After the war he returned to Portsmouth, and in 1867 went to the navy yard to learn the trade of boilermaker. He was foreman of this department for many years, finally resigning in September, 1908. In 1881-82 he served on the police force. He was a Republican in politics and had served as a member of the Board of Aldermen, the Common Council and the Board of Education. He was a Past Commander of Storer Post, G. A. R., and a trustee of the New Hampshire Soldiers' Home. He was selected by the Catholics to present their gift to Monsignor O'Callaghan, when he left Portsmouth to go to Concord. He is survived by the widow, whose maiden name was Crowley; two daughters, Mrs. Edward J. Jones of Chicago and Miss Gertrude K. Long of Portsmouth; two sons, John and Charles H., both of Portsmouth.

LORD, James J., Co. C, died Farmington, April, 1908.

LOVEJOY, Henry H., Co. F, died Littleton, March 22, 1899.

LOWD, Sedley A., Co. K, died Londonderry, February 6, 1917.

Sedley A. Lowd, aged 75, a veteran of the civil war, died here last night. He was born in Portsmouth, and enlisted in Co. K, Second New Hampshire regiment, in 1861. He served throughout the war and was in many battles. He was a past commander of Wesley B. Knight Post, G. A. R., of Derry, and at the time of his death was adjutant. He was a member of Londonderry Grange, sexton of the Presbyterian church and the town hall, and librarian of the Leach Library. He is survived by four daughters, Mrs. C. S. Campbell of Bellows Falls, Vt.; Mrs. Edith Gilley of Manchester, Mrs. Edson Watts of Londonderry, Mrs. Effie Smith of Bedford, and two sons, Sedley H., of Londonderry, and William H., clerk in the Derry post office. Two sisters also survive, Mrs. Erwin Foster and Mrs. John Floyd of Manchester.

DERRY, Feb. 12.—The funeral of Sedley A. Lowd was held Saturday afternoon from his late home in Londonderry, Rev. J. H. Vincent, of the Methodist church officiating, and singing was by Mrs. Florence Thurston Nichols. The flag service was finely performed by John G. Hutchinson of Manchester. Noticeable among the beautiful flowers was a handsome wreath marked "Our Neighbor," from the neighbors of the deceased veteran. The bearers were George and Robert Plummer, Elwyn Peabody and Eugene O. Greeley. The body was placed in the tomb in Greenwood cemetery, being unable to get through to Pleasant View cemetery on account of the roads being impassible.

Lucas, Harvey H., Co. F, died Canaan, Vt., February, 1914.
Dieu, Lucius C., Band, died Winchester, 1891.

Marsh, Alfred L., Co. B, died May 12, 1901.

Henry H. Marsh died today at the New Hampshire Soldiers Home, aged 71. He was born in Keene and was a farmer by occupation. He came from Keene to the Home five years ago. He will be buried in the soldiers’ lot in Park Cemetery.

Martin, Hazen B., Co. I, died Franklin, December 20, 1912.

Hazen B. Martin, one of the best known war veterans of this city, died this morning from pneumonia at his home on the River road, after a brief illness. He was 77 years of age and a resident of this city for many years. He enlisted in the Civil war from Manchester, April 22, 1861, his first enlistment being for three months. He was assigned to Company I of the Second New Hampshire volunteers. He re-enlisted for three years and was mustered in as corporal. June 30, 1862, he was taken prisoner at White Oak Swamp, and spent days of torture in a Confederate prison. After being released he was discharged from the service, disabled, in June, 1863. He was at the time of his death president of the New Hampshire Prisoners of War association, having held that office several years.

For several years Mr. Martin traveled through the state with a peddler’s cart before finally settling on his farm on the River road. He took a live interest in public affairs, and was prominent in the Republican party. He was an ardent exponent of progressive principles. He was prominent in George E. Sweatt post, G.A.R. A widow and a daughter, Mrs. A. Dolloff of Hill, survive him. Mr. Martin acted as a special policeman for his district of the city for several years. The funeral will occur Sunday. There will be a prayer service at his late home at 1 p.m., and at 2 p.m. there will be services at the Christian church in Hill.

McCabe, John, Co. D, died Dover, August, 1914.

McDowell, James, alias James McDonald, Co. A, died Soldiers’ Home, Chelsea, Mass., April 14, 1907.

McIntire, Charles E., Co. G, died Lancaster, October 18, 1907.

[Coos County Democrat]—Mr. Charles E. McIntire, whose long illness has confined him to his home for more than six years, passed away on Friday, the 18th inst., at 10:30 in the forenoon. He was born on the 15th day of May, 1833, the son of Samuel and Abigail (Morrill) McIntire, on the farm which his father and grandfather cleared from the virgin forest, overlooking the broad and beautiful valley of the Connecticut. His ancestry was of the strong and hardy men and women who struggled to clear the forests and open a new settlement. Like many men who have been prominent in the world's affairs, his youth was passed upon the farm, and that meant hard work, but the district school and attendance in Lancaster Academy for a few terms prepared his mind for more comprehensive studies and he was a well educated man, and he kept in touch with men and events of the time.

Mr. McIntire was united in marriage with Miss Maria S. Hunt on the 3d of July, 1855, a union which proved a blessing in so far that their interests were the same, and the devotion she has shown during his long illness to his needs and comfort has indeed been wonderful. Three sons, Charles W., James Irving and Arthur Eugene were born to them, and one daughter, Lizzie, whose sudden death, July 11, 1904, was a loss that seemed almost irreparable.

Comrade McIntire's honorable record in the great conflict of 1861-1865 commenced with the Seventeenth regiment, and continued in the famous Second regiment until his discharge, June 2, 1865. He was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg and many years afterward it was found necessary to amputate the leg above the knee.

He was appointed to a clerkship in the Pension Bureau at Washington in 1869 and served two years. Was elected town clerk in 1877, and with subsequent elections served the town in that capacity seven years. Was Justice of the Peace and Notary Public for thirty years, his last appointment being by Gov. C. B. Jordan during his term of office. He was postmaster of Lancaster from 1887 to 1931, by appointment of President Cleveland. Was elected Register of Deeds for Coos county in 1893 and served until 1895. Collector of taxes in 1897 and 1898, and this virtually closed an honorable public service of more than thirty years.

Comrade McIntire early identified himself with the Grand Army of the Republic, and filled the positions of Adjutant and Commander of Col. E. E. Cross Post with efficiency and with the confidence and esteem of his comrades, by whom he is sincerely mourned.

In 1875 he became a member of North Star Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of which he was W. M. three years and Grand Lecturer in 1885, and was Secretary of North Star Lodge and Chapter and Recorder of the Commandery many years. He loved the ancient fraternity and was always loyal to its interests, and it was fitting that North Star Commandery should bear a prominent part in the funeral ceremonies when a true and faithful Sir Knight was laid to rest. The funeral services were at his late home on Sunday, the 20th inst., when many friends and neighbors assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to so worthy a man. Rev. A. L. Smith read appropriate selections from scripture, offered a touching prayer and made a few remarks, and the brothers of the Commandery concluded the impressive services by the beautiful ritual of the order, and the burial was in Summer street cemetery. The beautiful flowers, offerings of friends and the fraternities, gave evidence of the esteem in which he was held.

Mr. McIntire was devoted to his family and did all he could to advance their interests, and as a kind neighbor and friend and as a worthy citizen who was held in the highest esteem and whose confidence he never betrayed, he leaves a record that may be an inspiration to those who may come after him in domestic or public life.

MUSTER OUT ROLL

GOFFSTOWN, March 22.—The funeral of Henry Moore was held at his home on Paige Hill yesterday afternoon. Rev. E. C. Goodwin, assisted by Rev. J. H. Nichols of Derry, officiated. A quartet from the Baptist church, Mrs. E. C. Goodwin, Mrs. Emma Spencer, Charles Davis and Arthur C. Spencer sang. The funeral director was John H. Wetherbee, and the bearers were George Pattee of Uncanoonuc grange, James H. Walker of Charles Stinson Post, G.A.R., George Hunkins of the Baptist church, and Ralph C. Marden, representing Webster lodge, I.O.O.F. A flag service was given by John G. Hutchinson of Manchester. Burial was in Hillside cemetery at Grasmere. Those present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Moore of Henniker, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moore and Harold Gilmore of Manchester.

MOORE, JOHN C. W., Co. B, died Concord, November 28, 1897.

Dr. J. C. W. Moore died at the Margaret Pillsbury hospital in this city at 5 o'clock this morning, after a brief illness, of pneumonia, aged 60 years. He was a native of Wells, Me., but had been almost a lifelong resident of Concord. He secured his medical education at Bowdoin College. He enlisted from Concord, May 27, 1861, and was mustered in on June 1 of the same year as a member of Co. B, Second N. H. Volunteers. He was detailed in the hospital department, and February 21, 1863, was promoted to be assistant surgeon, with the rank of first lieutenant, of the Eleventh N. H. Volunteers. In that position he served through the war, and upon his close return to this city, where he has since made his home. He was a member of Sturtevant Post, G.A.R., and held the office of Surgeon in its ranks at the time of his death. He was also a member of the Veterans' Club. He is survived by two brothers, Charles of this city and Henry of California, and by a wife and daughter. Dr. Moore's comrades speak in the highest terms of his faithful service during the war. As one of them expressed it, "Many a brave New Hampshire boy would never have been home again had it not been for the care and attention he received, when wounded, from Dr. Moore."

MOORE, JOHN J., Co. G, died April 13, 1900.

MOORES, TIMOTHY G., Co. B. Buried in Horse Hill cemetery, Concord; date of death unknown.

MORGAN, FRANK W., Co. B, died Sutton, July 20, 1901.

MORGAN, GEORGE W., Co. F, died Malden, Mass., October, 1911.

MORRISON, ANDREW, Co. D, died Dover, April 18, 1915.

Andrew Morrison died suddenly at his home, 14 Hill street, yesterday afternoon, aged 72 years and 11 months. He was born in Boston, the son of Samuel and Hannah (Tibbetts) Morrison, and has been a resident of Dover for the past 42 years, coming from Somersworth. Mr. Morrison was a Civil war veteran and a member of Sawyer post, G.A.R. He enlisted first in Co. D, Second Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and later enlisted in Co. F, Fourth New Hampshire. He was wounded at Drewry's Bluff, Va., May 16, 1864, and was committed to Point Lookout hospital, where he remained for some time. After his recovery he again enlisted, in the Veteran Reserve Corps. Besides his wife Mr. Morrison is survived by five children, Mrs. O. L. Wiggin, Mrs. Ida B. Green and Harry A. Morrison of Dover, Mrs. Eva, M. Leighton of Somerville, Mass., and Mrs. E. M. Swan of Milford, Mass., and one sister, Mrs. H. S. Corson of Campello, Mass.

DOVER, April 21.—The funeral of Andrew Morrison, a Civil War veteran and a native of Boston, was held at his home, 14 Hill street, this afternoon, Rev. Walter A. Morgan of the First Parish church officiating. John Hutchinson of Manchester, a member of the Fourth N. H. regiment, in which Mr. Morrison served, was present and conducted a short special service. Miss Florence Davis sang. The pall bearers, from Charles W. Sawyer Post, were Charles C. Abbott, Alvin Mitchell, Nicholas Tolmay and James Woods. Burial was in Lord's Cemetery in Berwick, Me.

Morse, Elijah A., Co. C, died Manchester, October 16, 1880.

Moulton, Charles W., Co. F, died March 3, 1893.

"H. L. Mace, Fourteenth N. H. V., who lives in Charter Oak, California, tells me that Moulton died in May last; buried in Oak Dale, Cal.; that he was present at the funeral and acted as one of the bearers. Cause of death, neuralgia of the heart. Says Moulton was comfortably fixed during his last days. Mace is an old acquaintance of Jesse Dewey."

Murphy, Dennis, Co. E, died Cambridge, Mass., July 13, 1904.

Murphy, Thomas, Co. F. Buried in Blossom Hill cemetery, Concord; date of death unknown.

Newell, Samuel T., Co. I, died Syracuse, N. Y., July 16, 1894.

Nickson, George W., Co. C, died Pembroke, September 3, 1909.

WHITEFIELD, March 7.—The funeral of Charles F. Noyes was held from his home on Elm street, Rev. William Thompson officiating, assisted by Rev. J. H. Winslow. Mrs William Thompson rendered two solos. Mr. Noyes was a member of Almon B. White post, G.A.R., and had filled a number of town offices. He will be greatly missed in town. He is survived by a wife and two children, Mrs. Zenas Dexter, residing in town, and Mrs. Phillips, whose home is in the South.

Noyes, Edward R., Co. B, died April, 1900.

Patrick F. O'Neil, one of the best-known steeple climbers in New England, died yesterday in the relief hospital from concussion of the brain received in a fall from a ladder on the Somerset-st. side of the courthouse extension Thursday afternoon. Mr. O'Neil was removed to the hospital after the accident, but returned to his home Monday, as he was anxious to parade with the civil war veterans Memorial day. Yesterday morning he became unconscious and was taken to the relief station. He leaves his wife and three children, Miss Mary J. O'Neil, a teacher in the Elliott school, North End; Mrs. Michael J. Riley of Monument sq., Charlestown, and Mrs. Charles J. Kelley of Revere.

Mr. O'Neil was born in St. John, Newfoundland, about 63 years ago. He was in the United States when the civil war started and enlisted in the Second New Hampshire regiment. He was in the battles of Fair Oaks, Cold Harbor, Drewry's Bluff, White House, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg and Petersburg. The socialist labor party nominated him for governor of Massachusetts in 1892. Mr. O'Neil worked on many of the highest structures in Boston, including Bunker Hill monument, SS Peter and Paul's church, Charlestown; the Old South steeple and the huge chimney in the navy yard.
Otis, Moses, Co. D, died Dover, August 14, 1896.

Parker, Henry E., Chaplain, died Boston, Mass., Nov. 7, 1896.

Prof. Henry E. Parker, for more than twenty years professor of Latin in Dartmouth College, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Tenney, on Marlborough street, Saturday morning. The death of Mr. Parker will be learned with genuine regret by all alumni of the New Hampshire college, who had looked upon him with feelings of love and respect.

Prof. Parker was born in Keene, N. H., April 17, 1821. His father was Elijah Parker, who was a well-known lawyer in that part of the State. He received his early education at Kinnball Union Academy at Meriden, after which he went to Dartmouth, where he was graduated in 1841. He next attended Union Theological Seminary, New York, and from 1857 to 1869 he was pastor of the Congregational church at Concord, N. H., with the exception of a year and a half which he spent at the front as chaplain of one of the regiments. In the fall of 1869 he returned to Dartmouth College as professor of Latin, a position he held over 21 years, and at the time of his death he held the rank of professor emeritus. As professor of Latin there were few instructors in this country who were his equals. His translations were marvelous for their beauty and purity of English. As a man his influence on the Dartmouth life was specially marked, and his retirement from the institution was greatly felt.

He leaves one brother, a son and a daughter, the latter being the wife of Dr. Tenney, master of the Evening High School in this city. Professor Parker's last years were spent at the home of his daughter, and for four years he had been failing steadily in health. His body will be taken to Hanover for burial. Funeral services will be held there.

Parrish, William E., Co. F. Was drafted at St. Johnsbury, Vt., and assigned to 4th Vt. Vols.; wounded three times at battle of the Wilderness; taken prisoner, sent to Libby prison, from there to Andersonville, since which nothing is known of him or his fate.

Partridge, Simeon, Co. B, died West Concord, April 21, 1916.

Simeon Partridge, one of the best-known men in this section, died at the home, 499 North State street, Friday evening at 9 o'clock, after a brief illness lasting less than a week. He was born in Croydon, April 23, 1840. He came to West Concord in 1857 to work in the kit factory for the late ex-Mayor Humphrey. He was a veteran, enlisting August 6, 1862, in the Second regiment as principal musician, and was mustered out June 6, 1865, at the end of the war. Returning to West Concord he was married to Miss Frances C. Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Brown, by whom he is survived; one son, C. O. Partridge; two daughters, Mrs. Harry Danforth and Mrs. Walter Fuller, all of this place. In 1867 he started in the blacksmith business where the Haskell house now stands. In 1881 he formed a partnership with J. M. Crossman, which was continued for twenty-five years. He was a member of the West church, a member of the choir for forty years, and was chorister the greater part of the time. He was a member of Davis post, G.A.R., and of Penacook Park grange.

West Concord, March 17, 1917.—Frances C. Partridge, widow of Simeon Partridge, died at the home, 499 North State street, at the age of 73, this morning. She was born here, November 3, 1843, and was the daughter of G. W. and Lucretia Farnum Brown. She was a member of the West Congregational church, W. R. C., and Woman’s club. She is survived by two daughters, one son and five grandchildren, all of West Concord.
Second New Hampshire

Concord, January 27.—The funeral of William H. H. Patch was held from the parlors of Kendall & Foster Sunday afternoon at 5 o’clock and was largely attended by relatives, friends, members of E. E. Sturtevant post, G. A. R., the Woman’s Relief Corps, John Carver colony, No. 10, United Order of Pilgrim Fathers, and the police department. Rev. Charles C. Garland officiated and the vocal selections were by Mrs. J. Russell Burroughs. The services of the G. A. R. were conducted by Edward P. Kimball, Commander; Isaac M. Savage, Chaplain; George Tucker, S. V. C.: Samuel F. Patterson, J. V. C.; Loren S. Richardson, Adjt. The body was taken to Salem, Mass., for interment in the family lot.

Pike, Timothy H., Co. C, died Manchester, April 1, 1900.

Pillsbury, Henry M., Co. I, died Soldiers’ Home, Danville, Ill., March 10, 1912.

News was received in Manchester today announcing the death in the Soldiers’ Home at Danville, Ill., of Henry M. Pillsbury, one of the early letter carriers at the Manchester post office. Mr. Pillsbury was a native of Derry and was 77 years old. After the Civil War he returned to Manchester and became a letter carrier, doing duty until 1887, when he removed to Chicago.

Piper, William H., Co. F, died Laconia, June 20, 1912.

William H. Piper, a well-known veteran of the Civil war, and who was the commander of John L. Perley post, G. A. R., of this city, died at his home, 104 Oak street, last night. Mr. Piper served three years and six months in the Civil war as a private in the famous Second New Hampshire regiment. He is survived by the widow and three daughters. The funeral service will be held at the home Sunday afternoon at 2 o’clock and will be under the direction of the comrades of the post.

Place, George W., Co. G, died Littleton, November 19, 1902.

Plummer, Edwin, Co. C, died Auburn, December 27, 1913.

Edwin Plummer, one of the foremost men of this section of the State, died last night at his home, aged 75 years. He was born in this town and had always made it his home as a farmer. He was a veteran of the Civil war, having served three years in Company C of the Second New Hampshire Volunteers. He was a member of Bell Post, G. A. R., of Chester. He was a Selectman and went to the legislature for three terms. He married Frances C. Webster, Dec. 30, 1864. She died nine years ago. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Martin L. Piper of Auburn; a grandson, Carroll C. Piper, and a sister, Mrs. Henry E. Bond of Santa Barbara, California.

Pollard, Levi, Jr., Co. A. Letter addressed to him at E. Jaffrey in 1913 returned with indorsement, "Deceased."

Pressler, Christian, Co. A, died Keene, September 9, 1905.

Putnam, William C., Co. A, died November 13, 1908.

Reardon, William, Co. G, died Manchester, January 5, 1911.

The death of William Reardon occurred at his home, 606 Maple street, after an illness of three years. The end came very peacefully at 2:15 o'clock a.m. Thursday. William Reardon was a veteran of the Civil war, enlisting in Company F, Tenth Regiment New Hampshire volunteers. He served from March 30, 1864 to November 19, 1865, and was honorably discharged. Mr. Reardon was a devout Catholic, being a constant attendant of St. Joseph's cathedral and a member of the Holy Name society. The survivors are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Reardon; three daughters, Mrs. Frank J. Lynch, Mary G. and Anna M. Reardon; three sons, John B., Lowell, Mass.; William A., Bangor, Me.; and James A. Reardon of this city.

Richards, John E., Co. C, died Manchester, April 14, 1906.

Richardson, Hugh R., Co. F, died Littleton, February 3, 1910.

Captain Hugh R. Richardson, a New Hampshire soldier of conspicuous merit in the war for the Union, passed away at his residence in Boylston in this village early this morning. Captain Richardson's health had long been impaired by the results of three years of service and exposure in the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac. However, he was always industrious in business and faithful to his employments. He bore the burden of wounds and physical disability with uncomplaining fortitude. He was a gentleman by instinct and training. Whatever duty was before him he performed with promptness, decision and a cordial manner in which personal dignity never disappeared. He had many years of experience in the management of hotels in various parts of the country. In these enterprises his personality made him a valuable factor. He attracted the friendship and respect of the best men and women with whom he came in contact in the life of the modern hotels. With those of such eminent station in public life as Justice Lamar and Senator Spooner he enjoyed a friendship which was never abated.

He was a son of Hugh and Abigail Richardson and was born in Chicopee, Mass., March 2, 1841. He married Elizabeth Riley October 7, 1883. No children were born to them. He was a Democrat in politics and was never swerved from an unflattering adherence to his party and its principles.

At the outbreak of the war Capt. Richardson was employed on the mail and stage route between Littleton and Lancaster, and this, of course, was several years before the railroad was extended from this place. President Lincoln's call for volunteers was issued in April, 1861. Mr. Richardson had not then reached his majority, but he hastened to respond to the call to arms with such alacrity that he was the first volunteer enrolled at Lancaster.
and, indeed, the first in Coos county. His first enlistment was for three months, but the requisition for three months men was changed to three years and he promptly re-enlisted for the long term. The Coos contingent, of which he was a member, became a part of the famous Second New Hampshire regiment in Hooker's old brigade, of which Gilman Marston was commander in the first years of the war. This was one of the fighting regiments of the Army of the Potomac. In Captain Richardson's three years' term of service, the regiment participated in nineteen important engagements, in every one of which he was present.

At Gettysburg the regiment, then under command of Col. E. L. Bailey, earned the highest distinction for valor and good conduct. Its principal place in the battle was at the peach orchard. Here it fought against great odds, until at last falling back in perfect order to a position assigned to it behind the batteries and in their support, amid the applause of the artillerists. The regiment engaged in this great battle with 354 officers and men. It lost 193 in killed and wounded. Capt. Richardson was desperately wounded while aiding in the masterly movement which saved the regiment. He was shot through the body and neck and the wounds were almost fatal. He was promoted to the captaincy on the battle field. He was a born soldier, and had he entered the regular army would undoubtedly have attained high rank and added to an already brilliant career.

He completed his term of service in June, 1864, and resumed the unostentatious life of the average citizen. He was as modest as he was brave and no one ever knew what he was and what he did in his country's service in the time that tried men's souls, except by the confidence that comes of the most intimate friendship, camaraderie in arms, or the written records.

Richardson, James F., Co. G, died Marlborough, March 3, 1905.

Ricker, Nathaniel M., Co. H, died Haverhill, Mass., June 25, 1914.

Robbins, Leonard E., Co. G, died September, 1903.

Charles O. Roberts, age 73, who was well known in Massachusetts and New Hampshire as a former railroad and fraternal organization man, died Saturday at his home, 11 Lynde street, Malden. He was for more than forty years in the employ of the Boston & Maine railroad. Death resulted from a general breakdown.

In April, 1868, he became baggage master at Great Falls, N. H., now Somersworth. He was appointed a passenger train conductor on the West Amesbury branch in 1875, remainin in this position eleven years. Then he transferred to the Boston and Portland line, where he continued as a conductor until four years ago, when forced to retire.

He served through the civil war with the Second New Hampshire regiment. For three years he was president of the Regimental Association. He was a member of Col. Mudge post, G. A. R., of Merrimack, of Hiram G. Berry post, G. A. R., of Malden, and of Libanus lodge, I. O. O. F., of Somersworth, N. H. He leaves a widow. The funeral will be held at his late home Tuesday afternoon, and interment will be at Somersworth Wednesday.

Rutledge, James, Co. K, died Portsmouth, April 28, 1903.

At his home on State street this forenoon, after a long and very severe illness, occurred the death of James Rutledge, one of this city's best-known residents and a civil war veteran. Mr. Rutledge was born in Newcastle, England, March 19, 1840, and came to this city when but a lad, being for some years employed in the mill, and for twenty-five years previous to his illness, being engaged in business on Bridge street.

When a young man he married Annie M. Lynch of Boston; the devoted wife survives him and has ever been a beloved and honored companion. Eight children were born, of whom all survive, James H. Rutledge, Councilman Arthur J. Rutledge, Mrs. Edward L. Butler, Hugh Edward Rutledge, Mrs. Alfred M. Barton, Mrs. Donald McDougall, Misses Annie M. and Laura J. Rutledge, all residents of this city, also several grandchildren. A brother, William Rutledge of Alton, Maine, and a sister, Mrs. Smith Hilton of New Bedford, Mass., also survive.

The deceased was a member of the Second Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers, Company K, and served over three years. He was a member of Gen. Gilman Marston command, U. V. U., of this city, and his fatal illness was the result of war experiences.

For the past six years Mr. Rutledge has rapidly failed in health and for a long time has required constant, unremitting care. He had many friends and was devoted to his family, on whom the blow comes with crushing force. For although expected and sometimes even a relief from intense suffering, yet when the dark angel takes away the loved one all else is forgotten in the awful sense of loss and loneliness. The sympathy of many friends is with them in their affliction.

Sanborn, J. Albert, Co. C, died Portsmouth, April 21, 1913.

Sanborn, James H., Co. I, died Hampton Falls, October 17, 1878.

Sanger, Austin T., Co. B, died Concord, December 23, 1900.

Austin T. Sanger, a well-known citizen of this city, died at the home, 72 North Main st., last evening after a short illness. The deceased was a son of the late Charles H. and Hannah Jaquith Littlehale Sanger, and was born in Claremont, July 31, 1836. During the civil war he enlisted in the Second New Hampshire regiment, serving his three years. He was a member of E. E. Sturtevant post, G.A.R. He is survived by a wife, Mary A. Sanger, two brothers, George of Dakota and Frank of Boston, and two sisters, Mrs. G. K. Mellen of this city and Mrs. Warren F. Daniell of Franklin.

CONCORD, Dec. 27.—Prayers over the late Austin T. Sanger were held at the home, 72 No. Main street, at 1.30 a. m. yesterday, following which the body was taken to the Unitarian church parlors, escorted by a large delegation of G.A.R. men and E. E. Sturtevant post. The bearers, Comrades Thomas I. Little, Simeon Partridge, William H. H. Patch, B. Frank Varney, Charles H. Hayes and Samuel F. Patterson, acted as body guard on each side of the hearse. Services were conducted by the Rev. L. H. Buckshorn, and the vocal selections, "Rock of Ages," "With Silence Only" and "Gathering Home," were rendered by the Schubert Male Quartette. The committal at the grave was by Rev. E. R. Wilkins, and taps were sounded by Joseph J. Keane, while the body, wrapped in "Old Glory," was laid to rest in the family lot at Blossom Hill Cemetery. Col. Solon A. Carter superintended, and the arrangements were under the supervision of Louis A. Lane.

Sargent, Josiah H., Co. B. Removed from Lake Village about 1885 and died soon after somewhere up north.
SAUNDERS, JAMES E., Co. G, died West Peterborough, Feb. 3, 1911.

JAMES E. Saunders, for a number of years a resident of the West Village in this town, died yesterday at his home after a brief illness. He was born in Philadelphia December 22, 1831. He enlisted from Peterborough April 20, 1861, in Co. G, Second New Hampshire volunteer infantry, as a private, and was promoted to sergeant, sergeant-major, second lieutenant, first lieutenant, and was discharged finally at the close of the war, May 20, 1865, as captain, at Richmond, Va.

He was a member of Altemont lodge, A. F. and A. M., Themis chapter, O. E. S., Peterborough grange, and a past commander of Aaron F. Stevens post, G. A. R. His wife died October 29, 1910. Funeral services will be held Sunday at the Union Congregational church at 2 o’clock with a Grand Army burial.

SAUNDERS, JOHN O., Co. F, died Strafford Corner, 1901.

SEBASTIAN, CHARLES N., Co. A. Letter addressed to him at Troy in 1913 returned with indorsement, “Deceased.”

SHERBURN, JOHN D., Co. F, died February 10, 1913.

Charles H. Shute, a deacon of the North Avenue Congregational Church and well-known citizen of Cambridge, succumbed to a sudden attack of heart failure in the vestry of the church, in which he had been addressing the Christian Endeavor Society, last night, and dropped dead. Deacon Samuel Leitch, who was presiding over the meeting, saw him in time to catch him as he fell and send for medical aid. In a few moments four doctors arrived, but it was too late.

Mr. Shute served through the Civil War in the Second New Hampshire Regiment, and after the war settled in New Orleans, where he held positions as cashier of the United States Sub-Treasury and cashier of the United States National Bank. He had also held important offices in association with the G. A. R. Seven years ago he came to Cambridge and had been deacon of the North Avenue Congregational Church for five years.

—At the close of the morning service at the North-av. Congregational church, Cambridge, yesterday, a marble tablet was unveiled in memory of Charles H. Shute, deacon of the church. Rev. Dr. Daniel Evans, professor at the Andover theological school, pastor of the church in 1907, unveiled the tablet and delivered a touching eulogy. There were many friends of Mr. Shute present from the various churches in the city.

Charles H. Shute died in the church on the evening of November 26, 1907, as he was addressing the Young People’s Christian Endeavor society, and his last words are inscribed on the tablet, which reads: “Sacred to the memory of Deacon Charles H. Shute, who died in this church Nov. 26, 1907. My young friends, put your trust in God.” At the ceremony a large portrait of Mr. Shute rested on an easel near the tablet, decorated with red and white pinks and violets.

SHUTE, GEORGE M., Co. B, died Denver, Colorado, 1901.

Andrew J. Sides died at his home here today, aged 71 years. He was a prominent Democrat, and held under Cleveland’s administration an office in the revenue service. He was a veteran of the Civil war, having enlisted in the Second New Hampshire volunteers in Company K, for three months, but was not mustered in. He re-enlisted May 21, 1861, for three years, and was mustered in June 8 of the same year, but owing to disability he was mustered out on August 1. He was appointed first lieutenant, commission to date Nov. 28, 1861, in Company K, Sixth Regiment New Hampshire volunteers, and served until July 3, 1862, when he resigned.

SIDES, GEORGE E., Co. K, died Portsmouth, November 9, 1906.

The death of Capt. George E. Sides occurred at his home on Wibird street at noon of Friday, after a long and painful illness. Mr. Sides was born in Kittery, July 29, 1839, the son of the late Robert C. and Mary (Jenkins) Sides. He married in May, 1861, Miss Olive Moore, who survives him, with one sister, Mrs. J. H. Broughton, and three brothers, Robert C., Albert H. and Frank Sides of this city.

To the call for volunteers in 1861, Mr. Sides responded, and on April 17 he enlisted in Company K, Second New Hampshire Volunteers, Col. Gilman Marston commanding. He was promoted to captain of Company D on April 18, 1863, and was afterwards transferred to Company K as its captain. Some years after the close of the war Mr. Sides went to California, residing there some twenty years, and returning to this city with his family twelve years ago. For several years he was employed at the navy yard as quartermaster machinist. He was a member of Storer Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic.

SIDES, JOHN S., Co. K, died Portsmouth, March 14, 1900.

SIDES, WILLIAM O., Co. K, died Portsmouth, April 27, 1899.

William O. Sides was born in Exeter, New Hampshire, January 17, 1831, the son of Nathaniel B. and Elizabeth (York) Sides. He is of English descent on the paternal side, his grandfather having come to this country from Great Britain. On the maternal side the family has been American for many generations. His parents removed from Boston to Kittery in his infancy, whence, a few years later, they came to Portsmouth, where he acquired his early education in the common schools. He commenced active life as a mule spinner in a cotton mill, at which occupation he was employed for several years, and then entered into business for himself as livery stable keeper in Portsmouth. This business he followed successfully for four or five years, until he abandoned it to enter the army.

On the breaking out of the civil war, Mr. Sides was the first man to enlist in the State of New Hampshire, and was appointed by the governor as recruiting officer for the city of Portsmouth. In this capacity he enlisted one hundred and five men in five days. Although he had enlisted as a private, he was promptly commissioned as captain of the company thus raised, which became Company K of the Second Regiment New Hampshire Volunteers. He went to the front in command of his company, and participated in the first battle of Bull Run. On the retreat following the disastrous engagement he met with quite a severe injury, on account of which he soon resigned his commission. Subsequently he was appointed by the president to a captaincy in the Veteran Reserve Corps and assigned to command of a company that was sent to Albany, New York, to enforce the draft.
From there he was sent to Elmira, New York, and thence to Alexandria, Virginia, where he was detailed in command of the patrol guard. He was in the service there for two months, when the condition of his health requiring a change, he was relieved from his command at Alexandria and sent to Fortress Monroe. Here he took charge of five companies and attended to the unloading from transports and removing to the hospitals of some five thousand sick and wounded soldiers, and shipping them north when well enough to be removed to their homes. He resigned, but was later re-appointed as a first lieutenant and stationed at Fort Snelling, Minn., where he remained until December, 1865. He was finally mustered out June 30, 1866. Altogether, he was in the service thirty-four months.

After a brief period of inactivity and recuperation following his return home, Mr.
Sides went to Washington and served for a time as messenger in the house of representatives. While engaged in this capacity he received an appointment as inspector in the Boston custom house, where he served three years, and then was transferred to a similar position in the Portsmouth, New Hampshire, custom house, in which he continued for twelve years.

On the nomination of James G. Blaine for the presidency, Mr. Sides, always a strong Republican in politics, in association with another gentleman started a small daily paper,
The Penny Post, in the interest of Mr. Blaine's candidacy. The subsequent defeat of the Republican ticket and the accession of the Cleveland regime resulted in the removal of Mr. Sides from his government office, and he at once turned all his attention and energies to his newspaper, which he greatly enlarged and ran successfully throughout the whole term of the Cleveland administration and the campaign that resulted in the election of Harrison. When President Harrison came into office, Mr. Sides was appointed postmaster of Portsmouth, which position he filled until a change of administration, when he again was removed from office by President Cleveland on the ground of “offensive partisanship.” Under the McKinley administration he was promptly reappointed to the postmastership, taking office for the second time in September, 1897, and serving with signal ability and satisfaction to the general public.

Mr. Sides cast his first presidential vote for John P. Hale, the Free Soil candidate, and he has been a consistent and ardent Republican from the organization of the party. He has been active and prominent in state and local politics, and has served his city as representative to the general court. He has also served as chairman of the police commission of the city, resigning this office to accept his postmastership reappointment.

He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, in which latter organization he has served as Vice Grand Chancellor and Grand Chancellor, and was a charter member of Gilman Marston command, Union Veterans’ Union. He was married in 1858 to Margaret A. Badger. They have four children, Annie B. (now Mrs. Garrett,) Antoinette C., Grace A. and Walter Herman Sides.

Simmons, Albion R., Co. I, died National Soldiers’ Home, Tennessee, May 31, 1910.

Capt. Albion R. Simmons, a former well-known citizen of Manchester, and a native of Vermont, died May 31 at the National Soldiers’ Home in Johnson, Tenn., from a surgical operation made necessary by a serious wound he received in the second battle of Bull Run in 1862. His age was about 64 years. He came to Manchester from Gardiner, Maine, and while here was an active figure in politics and military circles. He was a lawyer by profession and had an office in Patten’s block; he was also a pension attorney. His home was at the North End on Webster street.

He was a brave soldier and had an exceptionally good war record. He enlisted April 24, 1861, in the Abbott Guard, a militia company of Manchester, which became Company I of the Second regiment, under Captain E. L. Bailey, afterwards colonel. After being wounded at Bull Run he was discharged on account of wounds and remained at home in this city one year, when he re-enlisted in the same company and regiment and served until the close of the war, May, 1865. After leaving this city, about twenty years ago, he went to Elizabeth, N. J., and from there to Florida, which has been his home for some fifteen years.

MIAMI, Fla., July 2.—Complying with a request made in his will, friends of Captain A. R. Simmons, a Grand Army veteran who died at the National Soldiers’ Home at Johnson, Tenn., buried his body at sea Friday afternoon, and the veteran’s last rest is in the depths of the beautiful Biscayne bay. Captain Simmons, who was a firm believer in evolution, expressed the further desire that no religious services be held over his body, and that his friends in performing the last rites conduct themselves with as much gayety as possible. These rites merely consisted of reading the will, the firing of three guns and placing the flags of the yacht at half-mast as the body, incased in a bag, was lowered into the Gulf stream. The body of Captain Simmons, who served throughout the civil war with a New Hampshire regiment, was first interred at Johnson City, but was exhumed when the contents of the will became known.

[Manchester Mirror and American.]—Ex-Congressman Martin A. Haynes, historian of the Second New Hampshire regiment, on learning of the death of the late Albion R. Simmons, wrote his old comrade of the regiment, Mr. Charles E. Foster of this city, from Denver, Col., where Mr. Haynes is at present located, and recalled the following incident of their campaigning during the civil war:

“I have many pleasant recollections of Al in the service and out. I wonder if there is another man living who remembers the circumstances of his crippling at the second battle of Bull Run. You may remember that there was a little stocky cockney Englishman in Company I, 'Jack' Davis. He and Al were bunkies and with a friendship like Damon and Pythias. On that August day at Bull Run the old Second had charged with Grover's brigade, had crossed the railroad and smashed through two of the enemy's lines, had been tumbled back into the open fields again, and in a confused line, but fighting like the devil, was being crowded up the slope of the Dogan hill. It was right here that Al got a whistler in the foot and was out of commission in a second. There was a drainage ditch, perhaps two feet deep, near by, and Al managed to crawl to it and roll in. A hole in the ground was a valuable asset just then for a wounded man, as lead and iron were flying mighty lively in all directions. On one side of Al, down the slope, were the Johnnies. On the other side, up the slope, the old regiment was making a stand and was being supported by some batteries on the crest. Al stuck his head up to take a view of the situation, and there was the old Second, not very far away. He could pick out his bunkie, 'Jack' Davis, and he raised his voice: 'Jack! Jack Davis! Ho, Jack! 'Jack' heard that call, and bursting from the line, went tearing down the slope. He pulled Al out of the ditch and, half dragging and half carrying, got him to safety. If it hadn't been for 'Jack' Davis, it is quite probable that would have been the end of Al Simmons, for you remember how the men we had to leave behind when we retreated perished miserably—Littlefield and most of the rest of them. Well, there are but mighty few of them left now, anyhow.'

SLEEPER, Levi H. Jr., Co. I, died Manchester, February 3, 1909.

Levi Herman Sleeper, one of the best-known residents of Manchester, died at 9 30 o'clock last night, at the home, 841 Union street, aged 71 years, 8 months and 22 days. He was born in Plymouth, this state, May 11, 1837, the son of Levi Herman and Lydia A. Sleeper. At the age of five years he came to Manchester with his parents and for over 66 years was a resident of this city. He was the fifth of a family of seven children and was the last of his family. He received his early education from the Manchester public schools and finished his education in the McGaw Normal school.

April 22, 1861, he enlisted for three months from Manchester, and on May 22 he again enlisted for three years, serving his country faithfully throughout the war. He was a member of Company I, Second New Hampshire regiment, Col. Edward L. Bailey's famous "Fighting Second," and during his service he took part in the following battles: First and second battles of Bull Run, siege of Yorktown, Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, Oak Grove, Glendale, Malvern Hill, Chantilly, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Wapping Heights, Swift Creek, Drewry's Bluff and Cold Harbor, besides numerous smaller engagements.

His three-year enlistment period ended, he was honorably discharged June 21, 1864, and enlisted for the third time on August 29, 1864. His third enlistment was for one year, or until the end of the war, and he entered the service as corporal of Co. C, First N. H. Heavy Artillery, Col. Charles H. Long commanding. His regiment was attached to Hardin's division, which helped to garrison the line of defense about Washington at the close of the war. Mr. Sleeper was a member of the provost guard in Washington. He was in Ford's theater on the night that Lincoln was shot, and was one of the squad that searched Maryland and Virginia for the assassins. During his third enlistment period he was promoted to the rank of sergeant for meritorious service, and was honorably discharged from the service June 15, 1865.

Mr. Sleeper was a member of Louis Bell post, No. 3, G. A. R., of the Manchester War Veterans, and of the Old Residents' association. He was prominent in all three, and was held in high respect by his fellow members and by all who knew him. He married Miss Susan S. Lampson of Whitefield in 1870, who survives him, together with one daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Bickford. Mr. Sleeper came of a sturdy family that did much for their country. His great-grandfather, Col. Peter Sleeper, was a Revolutionary soldier, while his grandfather fought in the war of 1812.

The news of Mr. Sleeper's death came as a surprise to his many friends in Manchester. He retired early last night, apparently in usual health. He went to sleep easily, but awoke shortly after and found that he had sustained a stroke of paralysis. He called for assistance, and medical aid was summoned, but he was beyond help and died shortly afterward. He had not been well for a long time. In his death but two of the men who made up the original and famous Old Second regiment survive in Manchester. They are Chas. E. Foster and Lyman M. Aldrich.
Smiley, Stephen J., Co. I, died Lowell, Mass., October 2, 1898.

Smith, Edward J., Co. D. The Directory of Sedgwick Post, of Keene, for 1915, gives his name in the list of deceased members, but with no date or place.

Stevens, Benjamin T., Co. D, died Portsmouth, January 28, 1912.

Benjamin T. Stevens, aged 68, a veteran of the Civil War, died at his home on School st. yesterday after a long illness. He was born in Lee, but had made his home in this city for many years. He leaves a wife and two daughters. He was a member of Storer post, G. A. R.

Stevens, Clark, Co. F, died North Stratford, August 21, 1896.

Stone, Charles A., Co. A, died five or six years ago.

Storin, Michael, Co. E, buried in Concord; date unknown.

Straw, William H., Co. C, died Manchester, November 27, 1911.

William Henry Straw, aged 66 years, senior vice commander of Freschl post of the west side, died shortly after 9 o'clock last night, after an illness of only two weeks. Mr. Straw was born in Lowell, Mass., and had lived in Manchester sixty-two years. He was a member of Company C, Second New Hampshire volunteers, in the Civil war. He enlisted August 12, 1861, and was discharged May 22, 1865. He took part in the principal battles in which his regiment participated. Mr. Straw was a prisoner in both Libby and Belle Isle prisons. He was a member of Sunset council, No. 16, American Mechanics, and of Molly Stark council, No. 1, Daughters of Liberty. His death occurred at his late home, 164 Forest street. Mr. Straw is survived by his widow, Jennie M. Straw; a daughter, Mrs. Maud S. Foss, and a cousin, Mrs. Henry Hunter of Candia.

By occupation Mr. Straw was a painter. In his many years' residence in Manchester he had made a wide circle of friends, and he was exceedingly popular with an acquaintance larger than that which usually surrounds the ordinary citizen.

The funeral of William H. Straw, the well-known Grand Army man, was held yesterday, prayers being said at the home, 164 Forest street, at 1 o'clock. Public services were observed at the South Main-street Congregational church at 2 o'clock, the Rev. David Fraser conducting the services. A large attendance of friends and members of the societies to which he belonged was present. The Amphion quartet rendered several selections. Captain Joseph Freschl post, G.A.R., under Commander James S. Brown, Senior Vice Commander Wesley Eastman, Chaplain William M. Richmond, Junior Vice Commander M. B. McAllister performed the impressive service of the G.A.R. Sunset council, American Mechanics, conducted its service. Councilor Henry Iller and Councilor of the State Joseph Hill of Newport, assisted by Harrill Hill, George R. Jackson and James Woodman. A large delegation from Molly Stark council, Daughters of Liberty, Councilor Hattie Davis, Chaplain Lucy Severance.

Following the service at the church, the line was formed, and the Manchester Fife and Drum corps in the lead, with Captain Joseph Freschl post under Commander James S. Brown, the American Mechanics and the Daughters of Liberty. They marched to Granite square, where a special car was in waiting. A canopy was erected over the grave. The casket was covered with beautiful flowers from relatives, friends and the se-

TAYLOR, James, Co. H, died Kensington, June 9, 1911.

The funeral of James Taylor, who died in Kensington Friday, took place at the home yesterday afternoon and was conducted by Rev. B. J. H. Shaw, pastor of Kensington Congregational church. Mr. Taylor, who had no near relatives, was a veteran and burial was in the soldiers' lot in Exeter cemetery.

TAYLOR, Samuel, Co. K, died May 14, 1901.

When Miss Theresa Perkins of Farmington, a teacher in the public schools of Newfields, went to her day's duties this morning, she noticed an unusual chill about the room, and sent one of her pupils, Eugene LaVangie, into the basement to find the janitor, John B. Tetherly. The little fellow found him sitting in a chair with his hands folded, and, after speaking to him, was surprised to get no answer. Thinking that something was wrong with him, he hurried to tell his teacher. Miss Perkins timidly advanced and took a peek into the basement and was horrified to find the man dead in his chair. Neighbors were notified and soon Deputy Medical Referee John G. W. Knowlton of Exeter was notified. He pronounced death due to natural causes, and stated that he had probably been dead for about an hour.

Mr. Tetherly was born in Newmarket, and was 72 years of age. He was the town's oldest veteran of the Civil war, and his record in the service of his country was a noteworthy one. He enlisted at the breaking out of the war in the Second New Hampshire volunteers in Company E. It was a strange fact that death overtook him in the basement where the building stood in which he offered his services to his country, the old town hall where the meeting was held being destroyed by fire in 1907.

He was the second man in Newfields, then South Newmarket, to enlist. He returned to South Newmarket at the close of the war and took up his vocation, that of iron molder. He was a member of the G. A. R. and of Fraternity lodge, J. O. O. F., of Newfields. A widow survives him, and also a son-in-law, George A. Merrill of Augusta, Me.

It is probable that the exertion of wading through the snow to the school building overtaxed his heart, as he had complained of experiencing pains there of late.

Tuttle, Charles D., Co. A, died Epping, May 20, 1898.

Tuttle, Freeman H., Co. B, died June 21, 1909.

Tuttle, George B., Co. C, died East Derry, January 24, 1912.

George B. Tuttle of East Derry died suddenly at his home this forenoon about 9 o'clock. He arose as usual in the early morning and was about the place as had been his custom for years past. He had not been in very rugged health for some months, but had not failed perceptibly and was able to walk to the store and the post office. He came into the house, sat down in his accustomed chair, and without uttering a word passed quietly away.

Mr. Tuttle was born in Goffstown 80 years ago the coming April, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Tuttle. He enlisted in the Civil war first in Company G, First New Hampshire cavalry, and then in Company C, Second New Hampshire volunteers. He was a pensioner. For many years he had been a member of George E. Upton post, G.A.R., and had served as adjutant for a number of years. He was also a post commander of the post. His wife died two years ago, and his wife's sister, Mrs. Otis, has been his housekeeper. He had three half brothers, Charles of Haverhill, Mass., Frank of Danville and William of Kingston.

Varney, Benjamin F., Co. B, died Penacook, May 27, 1914.

B. Frank Varney, a well-known resident here, died at his home on Merrimack street last evening after a short illness. Mr. Varney was about 76 years old and was a veteran of the Civil war. At the time of his death he was senior vice commander of W. I. Brown post. Besides a wife, he is survived by a daughter and several grandchildren.

Penacook, June 1.—The funeral of B. Frank Varney was held at his home Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, Rev. James Greer officiating. Misses Helen Duguid and Emma Foster, Herbert Rolfe and Almon Harris sang "Rock of Ages" and "Nearer, my God, to Thee." The bearers were Robert Harris, George Fletcher, Harry and Harlow Rolfe, and Ross and Rowland Cushing. Burial was at Woodlawn cemetery, where comrades of W. I. Brown post performed their burial service.

Muster Out Roll

Manchester people, especially those affiliated with patriotic associations, are deeply pained by the news received from Lowell, Mass., announcing the sudden death of Frank C. Wasley, brother of Fraser A. Wasley of this city, and state inspector of factories for Massachusetts.

Mr. Wasley was born in Mitcham, England, near London, in 1839, and came to this country with his father and other members of the family when he was four years old. They at first settled in Chelsea, Mass., and soon after came to this city. When the Civil war broke out young Wasley enlisted on April 22, which was soon after the firing on Fort Sumter, for three months, but was not mustered into the service. On May 22 following, he re-enlisted for three years in the Second New Hampshire volunteers, and was mustered in June 7, as corporal. He was appointed sergeant, then sergeant-major, Aug. 25, 1862; second lieutenant in Co. C, Sept. 1, 1862; first lieutenant June 18, 1863; was wounded July 2 at the battle of Gettysburg, and was mustered out of the service June 21, 1864.

The regiment did not contain a braver or more popular soldier. He was a member of the Second Regiment quartet, the songs of which enlivened countless hours in camp. He also served the regiment as a member of the committee which located and put in place the regimental monument on the battlefield of Gettysburg, where the organization of which he was a member won imperishable renown. He was the father of the Lowell Veteran association, which built the first headquarters building at Weirs, a leading spirit in the Second Regiment association, a member of the Third Army Corps association and the Hooker association. He was also a member of Pentucket lodge of Odd Fellows in Lowell.

Mr. Wasley had a great love and reverence for Harriet P. Dame, one of the most famous war nurses, who was attached to the Second regiment, and who won the personal favor of the Confederate general, Stonewall Jackson, at the second battle of Bull Run. She was caring for the wounded of the Second regiment when the Confederates swept the field and she found herself within the rebel lines. Jackson was so impressed by her that he had a tent pitched for her especially and gave her a guard and allowed her to carry on her work of ministering to the wounded. On the retirement of the Union army he sent her under escort to the Union lines. On each succeeding Memorial day following the death of Miss Dame, Mr. Wasley forwarded a silk flag from Lowell to Concord to be placed above her grave, and there the flag which he contributed last May is flying above the venerated and much beloved woman's last resting place.

While living in Manchester, Mr. Wasley learned the trade of a painter with the late John L. Kennedy, who had a paint shop at the corner of Hanover street and Nufield lane, where the west end of the opera block now stands. After the war he located in Lowell, and for 24 years was boss painter in the employ of the Bigelow manufacturing company. Twelve years ago the late lamented Governor Greenhalge of Massachusetts appointed him state inspector of factories, and this position he retained to the day of his death. He was employed Tuesday in making an inspection of conditions at the Merrimac manufacturing company in Lowell.

Mr. Wasley is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Joseph N. Marston of Lowell; three brothers, Herbert J. of Medford, Mass., Fred K. of Norwich, Conn., and Fraser A. of Manchester, and four grandchildren.

WOOD, LEWIS, Co. E, died Montpelier, Vt., November 9, 1915.

[Manchester Union, Nov. 23, 1915. ]—There has just died at Montpelier, Vt., at the advanced age of 77 years, a man whose war record is as remarkable for what did not happen to him as is that of many for the wounds which they survived. The man was Louis Wood. He was born in the town in which he died and served throughout the Civil war from Bull Run to the fall of Richmond. He did service in twenty-three engagements and never received a scratch or saw a sick day during the entire time. At the conclusion of the war, Mr. Wood was engaged for a number of years at the Blood locomotive works in this city, and was consequently known to many of the older veterans of Manchester. He returned to his native town of Montpelier 33 years ago and has since made that town his home. The cause of his death was a cancer from which he had suffered for several years.

WOODS, GEORGE W., Co. B, died New York city, June 20, 1898.

[Concord Monitor.]—George W. Woods, a well-known actor, who died very suddenly of apoplexy in a New York theater Monday evening, was a native of Nashua and had many friends here. His remains were to have arrived here this morning for interment in the family lot, but owing to a railroad accident in Connecticut, did not arrive until this afternoon. Mr. Woods was 48 years of age. He was one of the youngest, if not the youngest, soldier who went from this city in the Civil war. He enlisted at the age of 14 as a musician in Company A, Thirteenth regiment New Hampshire volunteers, Dec. 31, 1863, and was transferred to Company B, Second regiment New Hampshire volunteers, June 21, 1865. He is survived by a sister, Miss H. Addie Woods of this city.

WORCESTER, GEORGE, Co. C, died Milwaukee, Wis., Sept., 1905.

WRIGHT, JOHN B., Co. I, died Cornish, January 3, 1914.

YOUNG, HARRISON DE F., Co. F, died March 5, 1904.

William Clifford, a Civil war veteran, died at his home here today, aged 77 years. He was born in Warren, December 6, 1840, and enlisted at the age of 21 in the Second New Hampshire volunteers, Company B. He served with credit throughout the war, being mustered out December 19, 1865. He lived in Lowell for thirty years following the war, being connected with the police department for a number of years. He was a member of Garfield post, G. A. R., of that city. He was also employed at the Charleston navy yard for a time. He was a member of Oberon lodge, I. O. O. F., of Lowell, and Moosehillock lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Warren. He is survived by his wife; one son, Iolas B. Clifford; one brother and two sisters of Warren.

Lamprey, John, Co. B, died Concord, April 27, 1917.

John Lamprey, formerly a well-known stone mason of this city, died at his home this morning, aged 77 years and 27 days. He is survived by two daughters, two sons and a sister. He fought in the Civil War in the Second New Hampshire Volunteers and was a member of F. E. Sturtevant Post, G. A. R.

CONCORD, May 1.—The funeral of John Lamprey was held at the parlors of Kendall and Foster, Rev. George H. Reed conducting the services. The G. A. R. service was conducted by officers of E. E. Sturtevant post. The bearers were Nathaniel Southard, H. N. Dyke, L. S. Richardson and I. N. Savage. Burial was in Blossom Hill cemetery.

Patterson, Samuel F., Co. B, died Chicago, Ill., April 17, 1917.

CONCORD, April 13.—Gen. Joab N. Patterson today received word that his brother, Lieut. Samuel F. Patterson, died last night of pneumonia in the Wesley Memorial hospital in Chicago, Ill. Mr. Patterson was for many years superintendent of bridge building on the Boston and Maine railroad. The body will be brought to this city for burial.

Samuel Folsom Patterson was born in Hopkinton, January 23, 1840, the son of Joab and Mary Lorenzo Patterson. He received his early education in the district schools and in the academy at Contoocook. He served three years in the army during the Civil war and when his regiment was mustered out of service he had attained the rank of first lieutenant. Before going to the front, Lieutenant Patterson had been an employee of the Concord and Montreal, and after the war was made a foreman in the bridges department, subsequently being promoted to be superintendent of bridges.

In 1875 and 1876 he was an alderman in the city council from Ward 6, Concord, and in '77 and '78 represented that ward in the general court. He was a member of Rumford lodge, I. O. O. F., and in politics was a Republican. He retired from active life several years ago and this winter had been visiting in Cuba and Florida. He was returning to the city by way of Chicago when he was taken ill.

CONCORD, April 22.—Funeral services for the late Lieut. S. F. Patterson were held in the chapel of the South Congregational church yesterday afternoon and were largely attended by friends and relatives. Rev. Archibald Black officiated and singing was by the South church choir. Following the church service the G.A.R. service was held, conducted by Commander Nathaniel Southard of E. E. Sturtevant post, assisted by Chaplain O. P. Douglas, Rev. Mr. Weed and Loren S. Richardson. The honorary bearers were H. A. Dodge, S. R. Dole, B. S. Rolfe, J. Stickney and S. F. Heath, and the carriers were Charles E. Palmer, N. Saltus, and Milton Colby of Rumford lodge, I. O. O. F., and L. S. Richardson, L. M. Savage and A. B. Davis of the local G. A. R. post. Delegations were in attendance from the G. A. R., W. R. C., Ladies of the G. A. R., Rumford lodge, I. O. O. F., and the Rebekahs. At the grave the committal service was conducted by the G. A. R. and taps were sounded by Mr. Keane.
Taber, Charles L., Co. C, died Mill Creek, Pa., April 25, 1917.

[Manchester Union.]—Charles L. Taber, 74 years of age, died Wednesday at Mill Creek, Penn. He was born at Grafton, and left Manchester for Mill Creek a month ago. Mr. Taber is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Grace E. McKenzie of this city, and two grandchildren. He was a member of the Second New Hampshire regiment and the First New Hampshire Battery.

Thompson, Joseph, Co. D, died Lancaster, May 31, 1917.

[Coos County Democrat.]—Joseph Thompson, aged 83, died May 31, at the home of Dana Rosebrook. He was a fifer in the Second New Hampshire regiment in the Civil War. He will be remembered by the older people of this town as the fifer who could fife and march the length of our streets without losing his breath. He was the son of Caleb O. and Betsey (Standley) Thompson, and was born in Gardiner, Me., August 26, 1834. His people lived in and near Porter, Me., but moved to Carroll, N. H., when he was 7 years old. Joseph was away from Carroll a few years, going to Stanstead, P. Q., and while there married Miss Nancy Heath. They had one son, Gardner, but the wife died in a few years. He then returned to Carroll and began to work for Phineas and Mark Rosebrook and continued in their employ as long as they lived. Then he came to Lancaster with the Rosebrook family, taking charge of the farm, and made his home there until his death. He is survived by three nieces, Mrs. Hattie Howe, Mrs. Josie Woods and Mrs. Georgia Nelson, and two nephews, Charles and Seldon Thompson. He was buried in Carroll in the Thompson family lot, where rest his father, mother and two brothers.

Keyes, Franklin L., Co. B, died Portsmouth, November 30, 1903.

Falvey, John, Co. K, enlisted and served under the name of John Harvey. Died Portsmouth May 27, 1873.
