My Darling Husband,

I recd yours of the 30th Oct. last night and set right down to answer it but was so dissatisfied with it that I tore it up just now, and must try to write another although I am almost sick to-day. I have been troubled with a pain in my throat for three or four days, more than usual, and to-day it streams up in to my head, I believe if I see Eastman I shall tell him about it, and ask his advice. He has not arrived yet or had not yesterday.

We are having a storm. It began day before yesterday by snowing and we had quite a snow storm. But it
rains to-day quite steady. I hope it will clear off to night for such dismal weather makes one gloomy and low-

I was very sorry to hear Mrs. G was sick. and I thought last night I should like to be out there to take care of her but don't feel hardly able to take care of myself today. Mary Butler is dead, died of a typhoid fever not long since.

Mr. M.H. Johnson and wife were here and spent the evening last night. Mr. J. thinks this war will never be settled by fighting, so I suppose he thinks it will have to be settled by compromise. I hardly dare tell people around here that you would not come home if you had the chance. They never seen to believe it when I do

I have told Mr. J. that you wrote so. not long ago either, and last night he said he thought the Dr was glad of the oppotunity to come home and the thought they would all be glad of the <sup>^same</sup> chance. I didn't say a word. Some people when I tell them so, seem to take it for granted that you don't care anything about your family. Oh dear, I don't wish to complain, but I do wish I lived in a different place. Where there is a little more life, and where there was some one that I liked to talk with. I wish you would write and let me know where your Scotts Political Works are, and your Scotts Novels too.

I can appreciate these works better than I used to because I have more time to read. And I haven't anything in the world to read to pass away the time. I have been reading Funny Memories and this made me wish to read Scotts writings.

I will tell you how I feel about
your spending your strength if not your life in this war. I feel as wonderful, <sup>just as though you had been here</sup> last night and it has seemed

I want to write a good deal more but cannot my head aches so bad. Give my love to Jim Hays. Take good care of yourself. I will write again soon. Good night - Adeline. R. S. & Mrs. Emile
