Mask and Dagger Readies New Plays

Series of One-Act Plays Presented Jan. 17, 18

With just a week to go before opening night of the porduction of Apart-ments To Let, Finders-Keepers, and The Long Christmas Dinner, the technical crews are working diligently un-der Instructor Wesley Brett to get everything ready for the casts.

The stage manager for the three oneact plays is Carol Ralph. If you've seen Carol walking along the street seen Carol walking along the street to supper in dungarees and shirt literally splashed with paint it probably means she's taking a few minutes out from "managing" to get a bite to eat. The director of the scene shifts for this production is Dorothy Coporan. Dottie is doing lots of close figuring, so that the delays between plays will be as brief as possible. For the first two plays, by the way, the same setting will be used with interchangeable parts to make you, in the audience. ting will be used with interchangeable parts to make you, in the audience, imagine you're seeing two different sets. If you think it's easy to make such a set, drop in at New Hampshire Hall sometime before midnight and watch pieces of the scenery in the making, which will emerge opening night as a complete set. It's a difficult job that takes a good deal of time and effort.

Jerry Dearborn, Donald Clough, and Irene Fox compose the committee of three in charge of lighting. You have three in charge of lighting. You have to be on your toes to get a certain light on at a certain time and focused in a certain spot. Jerry, Don, and Irene are the ones who will be responsible. This also takes a lot of experimenting and planning. The Long Christmas Dinner especially calls for some tricky lighting to produce the right effect. lighting to produce the right effect. When it's just a part of the whole production the nights of the performance, it's not hard to forget the energy and thought that the students put into making the performance a success.

They must check the make-up kits to see that everything is there, study the characters in order to know the right shade of foundation, lipstick, powder, etc. for the actors in their particular roles, and practice applying the make-up beforehand.

The procuring of all hand props for The procuring of all hand props for the plays is the task of Marilyn Bowen, Irene Fox, and Anne Patricia Parker. They are the ones who will see to it that the little things like leases, wastebaskets, and telephones, all of which are essential to a play, are present. This means a lot of footwork, begging and borrowing. It also involves popping in at rehearsals to get a good idea of exactly what is necessary.

Two others who have worked hard handling the publicity, tickets, etc., are Norman Selzer and Lee Albee. Both are veteran actors, so they can appreciate the labor "behind the scenes."

Grace Castagnetta

Castagnetta Recital Pleases Audience

In the first of a series of lectures and concerts sponsored by the University, Grace Castagnetta, pianist-improvisor, was presented in a program of piano music at New Hampshire Hall last night. Opening with a Schumann sonata, Miss Castagnetta proceeded to delight the audience with a varied fare to suit every taste from that of the most descriminate concert lover to the neophyte in the field of music. With considerable skill and artistry she was able to transmit even the most delicate shadows of emotion that the music of other composers held. She gave to the chorale "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" a touch reminiscent of the harpsichord, the instrument of Bach's own time. From the simple dignity of this number she proceeded to the lively "Gigue in C Major" by Scarlatti.

In her second group of selections were four compositions by Chopin: "Ballade in A flat major," "Prelude in D Minor," "Valse in A flat major, op. 69;" and "Grand Polonaise Brilliante, op. 22." With all these she was completely sympathetic and gave the waltz especially well.

After a short intermission Miss Castagnetta returned to a program familiar able to transmit even the most delicate

Mrs. Alice Currier

Mrs. Alice Currier, house director of Pettee House, died on Wednesday morning, Jan. 9, in the Milford Hospital, Milford, Conn. The funeral will be held in Newport, R. I., after the arrival of her son, Lt. James Currier, USNR, from the South Pacific.

A graduate of Smith College, Mrs. Currier had been a house director at the University of New Hampshire since September, 1941. She was a member of the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. Currier formerly resided in Newport and Providence, R. I. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Constance Stokes of Cambridge, Mass., and Mrs. Carolyn Hutchinson of Milford, Conn., and a son, Lt. James Currier, USNR.

"Ballade in A flat major, "Prelude in D Minor," "Valse in A flat major, op. 69;" and "Grand Polonaise Brilliante, op. 22." With all these she was completely sympathetic and gave the waltz especially well.

After a short intermission Miss Castagnetta returned to a program familiar to all the audience, including the "Arstansas Traveler" by Guion, Rachmaning "Clare de Lune" by Debussy and the very showy "Tarantella" by Lizst.

The hit of the evening, however, was a series of improvisations, music composed and played at one and the same time as Miss Castagnetta explained. With uncanny skill that almost hinted of witchcraft she took several themes from various members of the audience and wove them into such excellent compositions that they took the whole from various members of the audience and wove them into such excellent compositions that they took the whole audience by storm. She then employed the themes of "Three Blind Mice," "White Christmas," and "The Marine Hymn" in a similar manner. Then someone asked for "Till the End of Time. For a moment I held my breath wondering what would happen this time to Chopin's most popular Polonaise. Miss Castagnetta did exactly what everyone desired — she played Chopin and ended the evening to rounds of applause.

Housing Shortage

If all the houses on campus were counted twice there still wouldn't be enough. In February over six hundred fellows are coming in, and nobody can deny that Durham nights are too cold to leave them out in the wide open spaces. Something has to be done. And as the president has explained in an open letter sent out during vacation, something is being done. Double decker beds are being placed in practically all the rooms in order to take care of the overflow. So there's the housing shortage beaten right at the start.

But that doesn't take care of all the problems that are going to arise. If you and your roommate had problems about when to put out the lights or how high to raise the window you're going to have three times as many problems now. An extra person means an extra temperament to adjust to, and that's going to take a great deal of patience and sane living no matter how friendly you are. You're going to have to learn how to count ten before talking a good many times during the next semester, and perhaps that will be more valuable than anything else you learn. It's a lesson that ought to be taken seriously.

Trophy Room

"Look," I said, "the trophy room looks terrible after we've spent an evening there. What kind of an editorial can I write so that people will try to keep it clean?"

"That's simple," said some office genius. "It looks like the devil when it's dirty."

Reason enough.

Lost again! Three for three, only in the negative sense as far as the Cats are concerned but at least in the Bowdoin game they didn't fall apart as had been the case in the two previous de-bacles — and we mean just that.

The Bowdoin boys had a little something which, as yet, the Wildcats have not yet had abundance of and that was fight. True, the Swaseymen displayed fight. True, the Swaseymen displayed a little more than usual but as you all know it was not quite enough to put across their initial win of the young campaign. On the rebounds and on the balls batted in the air it was always Bowdoin and particularly McFarland (No. 17) who grasped the loose ball and in many cases baskets resulted. To overcome this very apparent fault will take a lot of whole-hearted fight and a smoother phase of hearted fight and a smoother phase of teamwork. Of course, that is but one of the Wildcat weaknesses but in every game played thus far it has been by far the outstanding factor in the three defeats that have been afflicted on us by our more alert opponents. Passing has been somewhat of a prob-lem also, but Saturday's fracas saw a better brand of flipping the ball around and yours truly seems to think that the boys can hang on to the oval for the remainder of the season without

Winter Carnival Plans Being Formulated Now

The 26th Annual Winter Carnival, to be staged in the best pre-war style, is scheduled for February 14, 15; 16, and 17. To execute the plans for the four-day event, committee members, chosen recently by Frances Mikol, Carnival chairman, will be assisted by heelers for Blue Circle.

The committees are as follows:

Portland Next

The next opponent on the slate will be the Portland Naval Station and if, after reading this column you care to stroll up to the Field House you will see them in action (that is if you read this masterpiece Thursday). Not too much has been said about the gobs but we know that they nipped Bates by one point several weeks ago. After Portland, the Swaseymen will take a little trip down to Lewiston, Saturday, where the Bates Bobcats will play day, where the Bates Bobcats will play host to the Cats.

Over the very turbulent basketball weekend several of our future opponents also saw a little action on the polished surface. Harvard toppled Tech, Northeastern was walloped by Worcester and B.U. scalped Clark. We'll be seeing them in a few weeks.

Dis and Data

Turning for the moment to track we see by the paper that Boo Morcom.

Wildcats Outscore Bears In Second Quarter 23-17 McFarland Top Scorer

Showing flashes of the basketball they are capable of playing the UNH Wildcats were nipped in a rough and rugged basketball fray last Saturday evening at the Field House by an alert and well coordinated Bowdoin five 47 to 43.

The game started off in typical fashion as the Polar Bears scored twice in less than a minute to forge into an less than a minute to forge into an early lead 4-0. The Cats with their new starting lineup of Kessaris, White, Petrocholis, Davis and Clapp came to life in a few minutes as White flipped in a foul shot and George Petre tossed in a layup shot to make the count 4-3. The Polar Bear's smooth operator Mc-Farland then sunk one and the count was 6-3 and in a wave of speed Leone and Morrison each flipped one in and the Bears were in the van 10-3 and it looked like the same old story to the Wildcat rooters but Bud Davis sudwildcat rooters but Bud Davis suddenly got hot sinking two along with Petro and Crompton and the Cats were in front 11-10. It didn't last long, however as Swasey pulled out the red hot starting combo and the Bowdoin speedsters zoomed to the front with five successive baskets. Petro then sunk one to break the monotony but the Bears kept along their merry way by tallying 10 more markers without interruption and as the half ended the Maine boys had a comfortable ten-point lead 30-20.

Cats Come to Life

It was a fighting Wildcat five that took the floor in the second half and in the twinkling of an eyelash Petro, White, Clapp and Crompton started popping them from all over and the Cats were but one point behind 35-36 in the latter part of the third starter. in the latter part of the third stanza. The boys looked as though they had finally found themselves but as in the first period Coach Swasey took the hot rocks out and Bowdoin went on to build up a substantial lead which the Cats were unable to overcome. All in all Swasey used every possible combination he had and perhaps the frequent substitutions hurt the Wildcats. Who knows?

Diophragines . . .

Dear Students,

School started Monday, the five dol-lars that Grandpa Diophragines gave lars that Grandpa Diophragines gave me for Christmas making it possible. Of course, a few freshmen came back Thursday, but they'll learn! I understand that the business office is open for five-dollar donations. Between you and me, my first class wasn't worth five dollars.

By all rights, I should mention Durham weather — it's still with us!

Durham (DioP) Dec. 18, 1945 Joe Schambier of the University of New Hampshire Student Police Force is alleged to have claimed that he will unmask 'Diophragines' by the end of the present semester. It is believed that he has already made some progress. It is pur-ported that he has so far eliminated forty-seven states and three territories. The progress on the case is phenominal.

Just in case you don't know Sherlock Schambier, let me draw a mental picture of him (.). Now, I'll By Music Department Schambier, let me draw a mental picture of him (. . . .). Now, I'll draw a physical one. A diaper pin cluster to Carl Wood-man Henry on his birthdate. Twit, how about mailing me a cigar? Now, students, you are all privileged to be able to cooperate with the University by sharing your room, closet and bureau with some other unfortunate. I do feel that no matter how much it may inconvenience me, it is my obligation as a student of the University to help alleviate the temporary housing shortage. I believe, however, that the University is financially exploiting the student body by asking them to pay approximately forty per cent over and above the normal room rent. I understand that the University claims that this excess is necessary to cover the aditional heat, light, and hot water, and wear and tear on their rooms. That's pretty expensive hot rooms.

The University reserves the right to quote prices. I think that this is only right and proper. However, I do believe that the student body should be enlightened as to the actual expense incurred by an extra man in a room. It has been rumored that a University official refused to even attempt an explanation of this, to my eyes, exorbitant rate. I, as a student, feel that I am intelligent enough to understand simple figures. I can't say that they're not justified, but I would like to know how the officials arrived at the officials. how the officials arrived at the afore-metioned rates. I have been told that the University is a non-profit organization. Let's keep it that way!

Yours trulius, Diophragines
